SUPERVISOR OF THE MONTH

When he was asked what he does, Ken Rich replied, "You name it and that's what I do." Ken is a management trainee serving as assistant to Robert Boyles, director of production and manufacturing for the men's and boys' hosiery division. His duties are general in administration and he has assignments in production planning and plant layout.

Ken Rich

Ken Rich is a 1966 graduate of High Point College where he majored in psychology. He taught special education in the Randolph County Schools after graduation; he was a management trainee for another plant in High Point before joining Adams-Millis on March 24, 1969.

With his ability to make friends, Ken rapidly established himself as a leader. His mild manner enables him to go along with others as well as to get others to go along with him. He has a keen understanding of human relations. His willingness to listen while probing a problem gives him a keener insight to the solution.

He assisted in the layout of the Komet and Wilson Rib machines in the knitting departments in High Point and Kernersville. He assisted Joe Dale, plant superintendent, in planning the consolidation of the Knit Sox and Whisnant plants in Hickory with primary responsibility for the layout of the finishing department. Rich participates in the production planning for all half hose plants. He is currently in charge of Plant 3's training program which is sponsored by the National Alliance of Business Men.

Ken Rich has spent his entire life in High Point. He participated in track and basketball in high school; he was co-captain of the basketball team. His recreational activities now are golf and tennis.

Another good thing happened to Ken Rich at Adams-Millis. He married the former Sandra Pressley who was employed in the data processing department of the company. They have one child, a daughter, Sandy, who is two years old. Ken is treasurer and a deacon of the First Church of Christ in High Point.

In addition to his participation in the Adams-Millis United Appeal campaign, he also serves as a captain in the city-wide United Appeal campaign.

A man who thrives on being busy every minute with a wide variety of assignments, we salute Ken Rich as our Supervisor of The Month.
