Basketball Team Opens New Season

Anvil Brand's basketball season is underway with ten fast and talented "men of the courts" expecting to meet 12 or 13 honorable opponents before the season is over.

Doug Tate is ably coaching the team, as well as playing; in the first game with Alderman Photo he was in the starting lineup. Also starting with Alderman were David Moore, Clayton Walker, Jack Beck, and Max Weavil. Charlie Schram also saw a lot of action in this game.

Alderman came out winner in this first contest, a fact which Sew It Seams reluctantly prints. However, there certainly is no reason to think any other team will be so lucky.

Come on out and watch your team; they probably could be spurred on to greater heights by

Note On Sizing Of New Brief

A note on the sizing of the new teen-age brief which is appearing in Anvil Brand's new spring line, comes from Helen Hughes of the styling and design department.

These briefs are sized for the teen-age figure, Helen pointed out. "Naturally a size 12 in this garment would be smaller than a 12 in a regular ladies' number," she said, "and consequently persons who usually purchase a size 12, should buy at least a 14 in this "teen-age short."

Helen said she wanted to inform employees of this before they purchased this short in their regular size and than found it is too small.

a loud and enthusiastic rooting section from Anvil Brand.

The team is in the Industrial League and at the end of the season a trophy will go to the leading team.
