

SEW IT SEAMS

Published Monthly by

ANVIL BRAND
INCORPORATED

High Point, N. C.

Martha Clontz, Editor

Letters To
The Editor

"One of Anvil Brand's most interesting personalities is Traffic Manager Paul K. Frye, also known as "P. K." to his many friends and co-workers. Paul has made quite a name for himself among the boys employed in the Shipping Department. He is vitally interested in the welfare of each of them, especially those who are working their way through high school and college. As a matter of fact, all but two or three of the boys on the entire second shift in Shipping are either in high school or college.

"Paul strives to employ boys in school and encourages them to secure all the education they can get. Several times a boy has quit school, come to work for Paul, only to return to school at Paul's encouragement. Many of our boys working in the Office once worked in Shipping and were promoted because Paul encouraged them to strive for better jobs. One boy was heard to say that he decided not to change from High Point College to another out of town school, because he was reluctant to leave Anvil Brand and Paul who was so interested in him.

"Truely, Paul has made quite a name for himself — among the boys at Anvil Brand and also at the local YMCA where you may find him engaged in many activities. He holds several responsible offices in clubs, is a member of the local Industrial Management Club, Men's Bible Club, of which he is secretary and takes active part in church activities at the Lexington Avenue Baptist Church.

"If there is a football or baseball game going on anywhere close by, you can be assured Paul is right there watching. His love for sports is partly responsible for his applying for a job here at Anvil Brand. On hearing the company had a ball team he applied for a job in order to play

(Continued on Page Three)

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

To My Fellow Workers

All mankind at this season cherishes the Christmas Spirit because it is our treasure chest of good will for others and our storehouse for the regard of others which we are eager to enjoy. So it is with warm greetings and earnest hopes for your good fortune and happiness that I wish for you and yours a genuinely Merry Christmas.

Sincerely yours,

R.C. Kirchofer.

Pants

By Betty
Biby

Well, the Pants Department is having a rest before Christmas. We all are enjoying the week going Christmas shopping, but we'll be back before the holidays for the Christmas party!

We would like to wish a special Merry Christmas to Maggie Humphrey who is ill . . . We enjoy having Kathryn Johnson with us. We think she does a fine job of helping the girls.

The bundles' boys learned their lesson Hallowe'en, so I guess they will leave firecrackers alone during the Christmas holidays. We are glad to be able to save through the new Christmas Club. (If we don't get our hands on the money we can save it.)

HAPPY BIRTHDAY — Ludie Mae Ingram, center above, was surprised with presents on her birthday recently. Some of the employees who work with Ludie Mae in Dungaree are shown presenting the gifts to her. Left are Nell Rich and Virginia Shiveley and at Ludie Mae's right are Mildred Turner and Virginia Jennings.