

BEFORE AND AFTER PICTURE — Edith English, current safety inspector at Sherrod, displays two safety posters made by Geneva Hoffner of the Pants Department. The posters illustrate the way some machines appeared "before 1957" with spools and other items cluttering the working area. The machine, free of unnecessary objects and clean is the "after" picture. A campaign toward keeping individual machines cleaner and neater now is underway in the plants, with the shirt department at Sherrod the first group to undertake the project as a group. Operators in that department have been furnished cloths to clean their machines each day and Ossie Wright, safety director, said plans are to extend the program to each department.

H. T. Short Looks Back On Attendance Record

The beginning of a new year is a good time for review of past records and H. T. Short recently recalled that he has had only one illness during his entire working career which kept him away from his job. Mr. Short is superintendent of Hudson plant and an assistant vice-president of Anvil Brand.

MR. SHORT

Up until that one illness several years ago when he contracted influenza and was away from work about two weeks, Mr. Short had a record of working 27 years with only seven lost hours. And since returning to work from his bout with the "flu" he has had no lost time due to illness.

Mr. Short said periodic check-ups by his doctor have shown him in excellent health and after his last visit to the doctor, the verdict was "100 percent O. K."

Mr. Short says he believes a number of factors have contributed to his continuous good health. One of these is the fact that he eats a well-balanced diet with plenty of green vegetables and "always has." Another is
