

"The"Campus Echo"

A queer little man who reminded me so much of a jack-in-the-box as he rose from his seat and came quickly to the front of the platform and announced his text as follows:

"Ladies and gentlemen, as you know we are here to get rid of sins and I have chosen such a text for my sermon today. It is, Brothers remove thy sins from the bosom. From the amen corner could be heard loud shouts of amen, Halleluiah, praise his name, wow, by the shrill voices of women, etc. It was very much like an asylum where only the mad would care to be.

A short man of rather light complexion seemed to have something biting him as he wiggled from place to place and looked so uneasy. For the hundredth time the jack-in-the-box like preacher shouted, "Isay, brother, remove thy sins from thy bosom." The man on the front seat turned and glanced all around him, rose from his seat, walked up to the platform, unfastened his shirt and quickly removed a small smoked ham from his bosom.

"Say, Jim," he said to the preacher, "your teachings must be true cause how in the world did you know I had stole dat ham and hid it in my bosom? Here it is keep it."

To every one's dismay he returned to the front seat and began mourning louder than any of the others. Soon he was shouting and said to be saved.

Preaching was soon over and a number of songs was sung by the older people after which the meeting was adjourned and we started for home. I was uneasy all the way because I knew what would surely happen when we did arrive. No sooner had we entered the house than my mother gave me a sound spanking and sent me to bed, but was not it worth it for I truly had a lot of fun.

By--Maggie E. Highsmith

HERE'S SOMETHING FOR YOU

Joseph Pulitzer came to America a German emigrant boy, so poor he is reported to have slept on the benches of the City Hall Park in New York City. In the pocket of his mind were two rough hewn luck pieces--energy and grit. Years after he became the owner of the New York World Building, fronting the place of his open air bed, and of the great newspaper housed therein, with its instrumentalities that flashed its news from all the world.