

Maryland Censor

A photograph showing crowded dormitory conditions prompted the dean of men at the University of Maryland to confiscate several copies of the Diamondback, student newspaper.

When Dean Geary Eppley objected to a picture of basement living quarters for 24 women students, he decided to make off with the papers so nobody else could see it.

In addition to Mrs. Vernese B. O'Neal and Lindsey A. Merritt, associates in the News Bureau, the 1953 solicitors were: Mrs. Lizzie Cannady, Dr. Benjamin F. Smith, Miss Hazel Clarke, Dr. Thomas E. Malone, Miss H. R. Fisher, Prof. C. L. Holmes, Dr. C. E. Boulware, Mrs. Hazel E. McCree, and Mr. James W. Younge.

Lt. Cols. McLean and Scruggs reported at press time that two student organizations had been among the first to pledge to the 1953 UF. They are the Delta Sigma Theta Sorority and the Pyramid Club. McLean and Scruggs are available daily at the ECHO office and in the News Bureau for other contributions.

excites most interest, this year's clash takes on special significance as the Eagles are slightly favored to win. "Most of the students want to be on hand for the kill" is the way the student government president views the situation. "There's victory in the air."

A. and T.'s two recent losses to the powerful Rattlers of Florida A. and M. and the Virginia State Trojans, coupled with NCC's decisive victories over Johnson C. Smith and West Virginia, account for the optimism. As one student put it, "The feeling here is that this is definitely THE year."

N. C. College Law School Report On Busy Year; Maps New Plans

A report on activities of the past year was made recently by the law school which is currently outlining plans for 1953-54.

Following last year's successful beginning, the school will continue its sponsorship of instructors presenting papers on significant phases of law. Last year's group included Prof. Daniel G. Sampson, the law of arrest; Professor Paul Simmons, public opinion; and Miss Cybil Jones, anti-trust laws. Mrs. Anne Duncan, librarian, reviewed a book of Controversial criminal cases, Francis X. Busch's Guilty or Not Guilty.

Visitors

Visitors to the law school included outstanding speakers from throughout America as well as abroad. They included Prof. M. T. Van Hecke, the University of North Carolina; Lt. James Samuels, Durham Police Department; Frank Shea, assistant publisher of Time magazine; Judge Sanya, the justice department, Thailand; and a group of German students attending Duke University. Other speakers have been invited for the current year.

Attorney J. H. Wheeler, Mr. J. S. Stewart and City Councilman R. N. Harris participated in a discussion with law students defining the position of the Negro in American life. These men represented the business and professional elements in Durham.

Meet In Boston

Law school faculty members and students were represented at the annual meeting of the American Bar Association in its Diamond Jubilee meeting in Boston, Mass., by Dean Albert L. Turner. And two students, Eugene Gadsden and Donald Ramseur, represented the NCC chapter of the association at the regional meeting in Richmond, Va., recently.

Social and extra curricular activities at the law school during the past year included bridge tournaments, an informal luncheon with Atty. M. Hugh Thompson as guest, and the annual spring banquet honoring graduates. President A. Elder and Dr. Archibald Carey were special guests, and the keynote address was delivered by Attorney Herman Taylor of Raleigh.
