

President Elder Welcomes Alumni To Homecoming

Resource-Use Meets Nov. 14

The Eleventh annual North Carolina Resource-Use Education conference will be held here November 14.

The conference, designed to help supervisors, teachers, parents, and students explore techniques for using community resources wisely to enrich learning, has as its theme "Channeling our Resources for effective Learning and Living."

The keynote speaker for the morning session of the conference will be Dr. Helen G. Edmonds, professor of history at NCC.

The afternoon session will feature an address by the Honorable L. Y. Ballentine, Commissioner of Agriculture, Raleigh, N. C. Four high school choirs and a band will present musical selections at both the morning and afternoon sessions.

The conference will also sponsor one-day Science and Reading Workshops. Director-Consultants for the workshops are: Dr. D. A. Edwards, department of physics, A and T College, Greensboro; and Dr. G. L. Johnson, Dean of Instruction, Winston-Salem Teachers College, Winston-Salem.

Clinics in art, audio-visual aids, English, social science studies, guidance, arithmetic, human relations and many other areas of learning will be conducted for supervisors, principals, teachers, parents, and students. State and national consultants who are specialists in the various subject-matter fields will participate in all the clinics.

Several members from the faculties of the University of North Carolina, Duke University, Winston-Salem Teachers College, A and T College and North Carolina College will serve as consultants.

Has Modern Jazz Gone To College?

By WILLIAM NELSON

In this modern era when new concepts and ideas in almost every area of life have developed, new concepts of progressive jazz in our musical world have also arisen. Just as much study and effort are required to perfect an acceptable jazz form as are required of some of our classical music. As a matter of fact some of the leading exponents of modern jazz, such as Dave Brubeck, were really trained as classical musicians.

Since jazz musicians have carefully studied and attempted to create a new musical art form according to the highest musical standards, it seems as though this musical art form would be just as acceptable as classical music by the American public. Instead, it has been pointed out by such leading musicians as Dizzy Gillespie of the jazz world that there is only a small number of the American people who really accept this new form of music, and that out of this small segment of Americans, the college crowd is the leading caterer to progressive jazz.

I have read many modern jazz reviews which pointed out that many of our leading colleges have included in their lyceum programs two or three jazz groups. There have also been several "funky" sides cut at concerts on campuses. Some of the most familiar ones are "Jazz at Oberlin" by Erubeck and "Jazz at Princeton" by the Johnny Eaton Trio.

DR. ELDER

GREETINGS FROM THE PRESIDENT

I am pleased to join all of the citizens in the North Carolina College community in welcoming our alumni who are returning for our 1957 Homecoming activities.

This year's program promises to be one of our best. Many persons have cooperated to plan for the pleasure of our guests at this season.

Our Student Homecoming Committee has worked diligently with cooperating local citizens, officials and students of Shaw University, our 1957 guest-opponent, and with our alumni in Durham and throughout our country.

We are grateful for the cooperation which the Durham Business and Professional Chain has given our Homecoming Committee. Such cooperation has become traditional between these two groups. Together they have made each succeeding Homecoming parade more spectacular than the one of the preceding year.

Officials and students of Shaw University have given generously of their time and help. We are pleased to have the Shaw "Bears" as our opponents because the relationship between our host college and visiting Shaw University has been a long and pleasant one.

Together our two institutions are engaged in the task of equipping youth with the kind of cultural, intellectual, and social competencies that will develop well-integrated personalities. Important adjuncts to the development of the well-integrated personality are the numerous cultural and extra-class activities in which students from our respective institutions engage. Our college shares with Shaw University the firm belief that whereas intellectual discipline formed from the world's store house of knowledge is the educator's major objective, there also exists the challenge to develop in our students a sense of social responsibility that will be necessary in their activities after college.

Athletics, therefore, at our college and at Shaw University, become an integral part of our total college program. We at North Carolina College are proud of our students who are athletes. We are proud that many of them recently have been members of championship teams in basketball, football, and tennis.

Alumni returning to us this year will perhaps regard as the foremost attraction the football team in action against Shaw. The game, of course, will be the highlight but we would like to point out that during the week-end there will also be concerts, pep rallies, bon fires, coffee hours, alumni reunions, art exhibits, tours of the campus, a vesper service, and other events designed for the pleasure of our returning alumni.

Speaking of our pride in our athletes who are or who have been students with us naturally brings to mind Lee Calhoun, our 1957 graduate, who brought us fame by his thrilling victory in the 110 meter high hurdles at the 1956 Olympic Games in Melbourne, Australia during 1956. I understand that Mr. and Mrs. Calhoun, an alumna of whom we are also proud, will be among our guests this week-end. To them and to all of our alumni we extend special greetings. We sincerely hope that all of the many pleasures planned by our students, fellow-citizens, and alumni will contribute to the most enjoyable Homecoming ever.

Sincerely yours,
A. ELDER, President
