Sit-Down Protest Succeeds

Freshman

on NCC's campus capable of comfortably seating a group this size, was the scene of all tests this year.

Saturday found the class of '64 staidly battling the sleep bug, weary eyes, and brain cobwebs in an attempt to master the maze of mathematics, psychological, and personality tests to which they were subjected. These tests were given from the hours of 8:30 a. m. to 2:30 p. m., and after which a supervised tour of the campus took place. The day was concluded and highlighted with a late evening social which gave everyone a chance to exhibit his version of the newest dance craze, the "shimmy."

Things took on a more somber tone Sunday, September 13, as spiritually-minded freshmen attended the first two religious events of the year. Under the direction of Dr. C. E. Boulware, the College Sunday School held its first meeting at 9:00 a.m. in B. N. Duke auditorium. At 3:00 p.m. the auditorium was the scene of the special Vesper Hour which was especially planned for the new students. The inspirational message was delivered by Dr. J. Neal Hughley, college minister. Later in the afternoon the Home Economics staff hosted the freshmen to a reception in the senior bowl.

Monday, September 19 was a time of varied assemblies, library orientation, and a special test for music majors. A brief morning assembly of all freshmen was held in B. N. Duke auditorium, while students on the National Defense Scholarship Loan Program met in the

On Monday, August 3, a handful of picked Negroes sat at the lunch counters of Walgreen and Kress at downtown Durham and quietly ate lunch. This was the result of an uphill battle to end lunch-counter segregation which began seven months ago.

The battle began here at NCC on February 6 when student leaders Callis Brown, and Lacy Streeter initiated the "sit-down" protest with a series of discussions in the freshman bowl. February 8 marked the day that Brown and Streeter, along with some thirty-odd students, cracked the headlines by beginning the internationally famous sit-down protest here in Durham. Through inclement weather, police arrests, court trials, and student apathy Brown and Streeter carefully and capably engineered the fight for lunch counter integration to success.

Since the integration of the lunch counters on August 3, there have been no incidents.

Music Assembly that afternoon. Meanwhile all music majors were tested in the Fine Arts Building from 9:00 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. North Carolina College's famous James E. Shepard Memorial Library was the site of the afternoon library orientation.

Tuesday found the freshmen very close to realizing their goal of becoming full-fledged, if grade-pointless, Eagles as they had only to take a health examination and register to complete the orientation exercises. These activities were scheduled throughout the remaining week.

Classes began for freshmen and upperclassmen alike on Friday, September 23.
