Golden Slated As Symposium Speaker

College Awarded $10,000 Grant

North Carolina College at Durham is among 20 state colleges in the United States recently awarded $10,000 each by the Danforth Foundation of St. Louis for scholarship grants to faculty members for summer study.

According to Dean G. T. Kyle, chairman of the committee appointed to process applications, the first award at NCC will be made for the summer of 1961.

Any regular member of the North Carolina College faculty will be eligible to apply for grants to cover pre or post-doctoral work. Appointments and amounts of each grant will be determined by the NCC committee.

Requirements are that the grants be used for summer study in the field of the humanities and the liberal arts, particularly in those subject matter fields which are outside of the grantee's own specialization in professional education and in methodology. These requirements restore the Danforth Foundation's purpose in making the grants, which is to help broaden college teachers in the humanities and liberal arts.

Members of the NCC review committee, of which Dean Kyle is chairman, include Dr. W. H. Robinson, Professor Pauline Newton, Dean W. H. Brown, and Dr. J. H. Taylor.

Beginning this month, Dean Kyle said recently, applications for the summer grants will be accepted.

Dr. Edmonds Appointed To GOP Position

Dr. Helen Edmonds, professor of History here, has been appointed to the national advisory committee of women for Nixon-Lodge, along with 39 other members.

The committee serves to activate national women leaders in the fields of civic affairs, professions, and business at the national level. Members of the committee will act as advisors to the three Republican co-chairmen on policy matters which cut across party lines to seek support of Democrats and Independents as well as Republicans.

Dr. Edmonds, who is a noted historian, seconded President Eisenhower's nomination for a second term at the Republican National Convention in San Francisco in 1956. She made numerous campaign appearances in behalf of the Eisenhower-Nixon ticket that year.

She has represented the U. S. Department abroad on three occasions—twice in Germany and once in Liberia.

Harry Golden

An already impressive list of Fiftieth Anniversary speakers will include one of America's outstanding writers and wits, Harry Golden.

Editor of the Carolina Israelite and author of For Two Cents Plain, Golden will be the first symposium speaker of a four-day commemorative program, which will feature state and local government officials, college and high school administrators, distinguished alumni of North Carolina College, and prominent citizens from throughout the state and nation.

Golden was catapulted to fame after the publication of his book Only In America, in which he made three satirical proposals to end integration problems. One such proposal, entitled the "Vertical Negro Plan," contended that since Southerners objected to sitting with Negroes, public school and lunch counter integration could be successfully effected on a stand-up basis. Another Golden proposal, the "Borrow a Child Plan," held that Negro maids might be permitted to sit in the white section of theaters, provided they were escorted by a white child. Still another proposal, dubbed the "Out-of-Order Plan," stated that whites might use Negro drinking fountains if the white ones were out of order.

Although Golden will head the speakers list on the Nov. 10 symposium, Dr. Ralph W. Tyler, director of the Center of Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences in Stanford, California, and the Honorable Arthur S. Flemming, secretary of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, are slated as the principal speakers.

Dr. Tyler will deliver the keynote address on Wednesday morning November 9, and Flemming will speak the following morning, November 10, in a general assembly.

North Carolina Governor Luther Hodges will participate in a special Anniversary Convocation, Friday morning, November 11.

Centered around the College's annual observance of Founder's Day, this year's special program will pay tribute to contributions of North Carolina College and its founder and first president, the late Dr. James E. Shepard.

The Golden Anniversary theme is "Appropriate Directions for the Modern College in the Challenging New Educational Era."

According to Dr. Helen Edmonds, professor of history and chairman of the Fiftieth Anniversary Committee, the four-day November 9-12 celebration will feature experts in various fields discussing aspects of the Anniversary theme in a series of panels and symposia.

Speakers on the Thursday, November 10 symposium on "The College and Accentuated Social Action" include: Harry Golden, editor of "The Carolina Israelite"; Dr. Douglas B. Maggs, professor of law at Duke University; Dr. Stephen Wright, president of Fisk University.

Code Formed For TG Game

Officials and students from two schools involved in one of the oldest and most heated rivalries in Negro College sports yesterday approved a voluntary "Code of Ethics" governing future athletic contests between the two colleges.

Representatives from North Carolina College at Durham and A&T College passed the comprehensive program dealing with behavior of coaches, players, students, alumni and spectators.

Dean A. L. Turner of the NCC Law School acted as chairman for the meeting, with Dr. G. F. Rankin, A&T Dean of Students, as host. The plan, drawn up since last year's A&T-NCC game in Greensboro, was given implementation procedures.

The new Code becomes effective when the two arch rivals meet in Durham in their traditional Thanksgiving football classic Thanksgiving Day. The game will be played at Durham County Memorial Stadium.

The group meeting yesterday went on record in favor of a permanent committee devoted to easing tension surrounding athletic contests. Spokesmen emphasized (continued on page 8)

To Get Ahead —

'Hustle,' Says Dr. Benjamin Mays

By Guytanna Horton
"Hustle, students", emphasized Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College, addressing a huge audience at B. N. Duke auditorium on Sunday, October 2.

Using the old parable of the men and the talents, Dr. Mays used as his subject "To Him That Hath It Shall Be Given." He raised the questions: "Why wasn't the talent divided between the man with two talents and the man with five talents?" His explanation was illustrated in the observation that a man of wealth, like Rockefeller, would be offered readily free board and lodging, whereas the common man finds it very difficult to receive such services.

The same thought was applied in terms of students' attitudes toward scholastic standings. He proclaimed: "The student who is above average is the student who hustles, and the student that is behind remains behind because he fails to hustle." "However," he warned, "if one has the above-average ability and fails to use it, he will lose that ability."

The speaker, one of the leading American educators and churchmen, has served as vice president of the National Council of Churches. Among other things he is an author. He is also a member of the YMCA and the NAACP. Because of his busy schedule, Dr. Mays was unable to speak at the Upper Classmen's Assembly.

Dr. Benjamin Mays pauses after vesper service to clarify a point for Alice Poston, senior of Shelby, and Robert Brown, senior of Winston-Salem.
