London Professor Discusses Press

Speaking from a theme "African Development", Princeton King, professor from the University of London, addressed students and faculty members in a recent Upperclassmen's Assembly.

"Despite the Wealth of Africa, poverty prevails," Mr. King commenced. Africa, which covers one-fifth of the earth's surface and maintains the world's most powerful water supply, in reference to electricity, may decide its problems into two areas - humane conditions and institutional handicaps. These problems form a cycle, according to King's analysis, making each factor a contributive agent of the other.

King answered the problem of what can be done: "Africa's hopes are invested in her ability to 'pick herself up by her own boot straps.'" He continued, "Political independence is the starting point of independence." At the end of the program a question and answer period was held.

Mr. King, who at 24 is a candidate for the doctorate degree, spoke to some of the classes in the Social Science Department.

Princeton King, a student under the Fisk University accelerated program, is a native of Albany, Ga. He is a graduate of Fisk University, Tenn., and later attended London University as a part of the student exchange program. He received the Master's degree in Political Science from London.

Mr. King, who converses easily in many foreign languages, gave his views of the Congo situation from London, and the United States. Said he, "the picture which is conveyed to the American public is necessarily slanted because of the position which our U.S. Government has taken in relation to the Congo."

"The U.S. sided with Belgium in this situation making the late Premier Lumumba an enemy and, according to our concepts, a communist." "Kasavubu", said he, "whom the government recognizes as the official head of the Congo, represents the Belgian-favored Congolese leader."

King said in conclusion that his interpretation of the Congo events in the Western press tends to see those elements as unfavorable to those favoring Congolese unity.

Dr. Norval Luxon, dean of the school of Journalism, University of North Carolina, congratulates Dr. Alfonso Elder and Mrs. Ruth Tillman, president of SSPA, on the SSPA program.

High School Journalists Receive SSPA Awards For 'Excellence'

Fourteen awards for outstanding performance were made to high school newspaper and yearbook staffs in the annual publications conference held at North Carolina College April 7.

The program, sponsored by Southeastern Scholastic Publications Association, attracted more than 300 students and teachers from the Carolinas and Virginia. President Alfonso Elder headed the list of NCC officials extending greetings.

Dean Norval N. Luxon, dean of the School of Journalism at the University of North Carolina, was keynote speaker for the honor awards program. Luxon described journalism as "one of the most important professions, demanding both training and dedication."

The veteran journalist and educator also challenged the high school students to seek more and better preparation as journalists in a time "of expanding opportunities in the field for Negroes."

David Ramberg, publications adviser for the American Yearbook Company of Hannibal, Missouri, was chief consultant. And Mrs. Ruth Tillman of Roxboro, N. C., president of SSPA, awarded the honor certificates to newspaper and yearbook staff members for outstanding performance.

Hillside High School of Durham won three awards and J. W. Ligon High School of Raleigh won two. The Hillside "Chronicle," newspaper, and "The Hornet," yearbook, were both cited for "overall excellence."

The "Chronicle" also won the award for "outstanding performance in newswriting."

"The Tattler" of Ligon High School and "The Echo," Ligon yearbook, won highest honors in editorial writing and design respectively.

Other winners in the newspaper category included: "Little River Hi-Tide," Little River High School, Bahama, front page make-up; "The Gazette," DuBois High School, Wake Forest, blending of editorial and pictorial content; "The B," Berry O'Kelly High School, Method, coverage of the school community; "The Adkin Hi Mirror," Adkin High School, Kinston, recognition of academic excellence; "The Voice," P. W. Moore High School, Elizabeth City, feature writing; "School Occurrences," Robert L. Vann High School, Ahoskie, over-all excellence among mimeographed newspapers.

Other yearbook awards went to: "The Lion," West Charlotte High School, academic content; "The Panther," Henderson Institute, treatment of album; and "The Allenite," Allen High of Asheville, originality and execution of theme.

New Tests

(Continued from Page 5) and present. It will include 90 questions—20 in each of the three fields of humanities, science and social science.

In its present form, the Law School Admission Test is administered in a single half-day session and is designed to measure aptitudes closely related to specify aspects of the study of law. With the addition of the two new tests, the scope of the test will be broadened to include the measurement of achievement in the areas of writing and knowledge of cultural background and it will occupy a full day. Separate scores will be reported on the aptitude test, the writing test, and the test of general background.

The Law School Admission Test is administered four times, a year in November, February, April, and August at test centers throughout the United States and abroad. Educational Testing Service of Princeton, New Jersey, constructs, administers, and scores the examination for the Policy Committee of the Law School Admission Test.
