

NCC To Join Sloan Medical Schol. Program

North Carolina College will participate in a new scholarship program sponsored by the National Medical Fellowships, Inc., announced Dr. Marion D. Thorpe, dean of students, recently.

Sponsored jointly by the National Medical Fellowship Foundation and the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, the program will begin in the fall of 1964 and will yield ten four-year medical scholarships to qualified Negro males.

The Sloan Foundation, which devotes itself to assisting Negroes with medical careers, will administer the scholarship program and will accept registrations, distribute application blanks, and select candidates.

The scholarship program, designed to help relieve the shortage of Negro physicians and surgeons, is financed by a substantial grant from the Sloan Foundation to the Medical Fellowships organization.

At present, 40 Negro students are studying medicine under the program in 23 medical schools throughout the nation. Scholarships, which average $5,000 per recipient for the four-year period of study, will vary according to individual needs.

According to Thorpe, interested NCC males who plan to enter medical school in the fall may secure information and forms from his office. The deadline for registration is March 1, 1964.

27 Students Begin Cadet Teaching

Twenty-seven North Carolina College students will begin an eight-week period of classroom teaching in 14 schools in North Carolina starting Monday, November 18.

All seniors, they will be teaching under the supervision of members of the NCC Department of Education and personnel in the schools to which they are assigned.

Dr. Walter Brown, director of student teaching at the college, indicated that this semester's group includes students majoring in nine academic areas, with the largest numbers in business education (9) and music (5).

Student teachers, their majors, and their assignments follow:

NCC Professors Cited For Work

Two North Carolina College faculty members received recognition recently for work in their fields.

Named St. Paul Trustee

Dr. Helen G. Edmonds, chairman of the Department of History and Social Science at North Carolina College, was among six persons elected to the board of trustees of Saint Paul's College, Lawrenceville, Va., on October 25.

A native of Lawrenceville and an alumna of Saint Paul's, where she completed her high school and junior college education, she is the board's first female member.

This is the second honor bestowed on Dr. Edmonds by institutions from which she was graduated. Morgan State College, which awarded her the Bachelor of Arts degree in 1933, conferred upon her the honorary degree Doctor of Laws in 1958 for distinguished work in international relations.

Awarded Degree

Milton E. Johnson, associate professor of law at North Carolina College, recently earned the LL.M. degree (Master of Laws) at New York University, it was learned this week, Nov. 11.

Johnson was notified by the See PROFS. CITED, page 4

THREE NCC CO-EDS POSE for cameramen after they captured three top posts in the one-day sports meet held at Livingstone College in Salisbury, N. C.

The three girls, all from Durham, are, rear to front, Pearl Mangum, a junior; Sandra Thompson, a senior; and Barbara Parker, a senior. The three served as captains of three of the four color teams in the sports meet.

Three NCC Co-eds Win Top Posts In Women's Fall Sports Meet

Three NCC co-eds were chosen color captains at the Fall Sports Day Meeting which convened at Livingstone College, Salisbury, Nov. 15.

The NCC girls, Pearl Mangum, Sandra Thompson and Barbara Parker, all from Durham won three of the four top positions from girls representing seven other colleges in the Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association.

The Sports Day Meetings are held in the fall and spring by the Women's Athletic Associations of various Negro colleges in the east. The girls elected as team captains head teams with color labeled, red blue, yellow and green, through sports activities during the one day meets.

Other NCC coeds attending the meet were Audrey Bowden, Gwendolyn Sellers, Williette Hamlet, Joyce Nixon, Thelma Gray, Ann McNeil, Jean Stroud, Claudia Prince and Carrie Barnes.

Mrs. W. W. Lewis and Mrs. Jennie Taylor accompanied the group on the trip.

According to Parker, president of NCC's WAA, the organization is now making preparations for a physical fitness test to be given in March, 1964, at the Spring Sports Day to be held at Hampton Institute in Hampton, Va.

Norman Tate Completes Track Tour

Norman Tate, North Carolina College sophomore track star, returned to the United States Friday, November 8, after completing a successful seven-week tour of Greece, Turkey, Iran, Iraq, and Romania under sponsorship of the State Department and the AAU.

The 1963 NCAA College and University Division triple jump champion, Tate competed in a series of track and field meets and lectured and demonstrated his specialties, the broad jump and triple jump, in a series of well received clinics.

In competition he won the triple jump in each meet he entered, setting several new national records. He ran on the winning 400 meters relay team in each meet and won the 200 meters dash in Turkey and Greece.

Jackson Wins Best Oral Cup

North Carolina College's moot court team argued its way to the finals of a four-state regional meet during the Fourteenth Annual National Moot Court Competition at Charleston, West Virginia, Nov. 15-16 and became the first Negro law school group in its region to win a berth in the national finals of the National Moot Court Competition.

Maynard H. Jackson, 25, a senior from Durham, won a silver cup awarded by the American College of Trial Lawyers for the best individual oral argument.

Other members of the NCC team are William Gaines Hill, East Elmhurst, N.Y., and Ira L. Williams, Brooklyn, N.Y. The faculty adviser is Professor Sybil P. Dedmond.

The NCC team, entering the final round of arguments against the University of Virginia Law School in the West Virginia Supreme Court of Appeals in Charleston Saturday, lost the decision to the Virginians.

The three-man teams of both NCC and Virginia were finishers in the two-day competition among eleven lay schools comprising Region VI, including Virginia, West Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina. Both finalists will represent the region in arguments in the national finals in New York City in December.

In the preliminary round Friday morning, the University of South Carolina defeated Duke University; the University of North Carolina defeated Washington and Lee University; and the University of Virginia defeated the University of Richmond. North Carolina College, South Carolina State College, Wake Forest College, West Virginia University and the College of William and Mary drew a bye.

In the quarter finals, North Carolina College defeated the University of South Carolina; the University of North Carolina defeated William and Mary; Wake Forest defeated South Carolina State; and the University of Virginia defeated West Virginia.

In the semi-finals, North Carolina College defeated the University of North Carolina, and the University of Virginia defeated Wake Forest.

All teams argued a hypothetical federal criminal case involving questions of search and seizure, arrest, inculpatory statements, the McNabb-Mallory doctrine, and due process requirements under the Fifth Amendment.
