GREENSBORO—North Carolina College's football Eagles flew to a six-point height here Thanksgiving Day and never lost altitude as they fought off the snarling, groping Bulldogs from A&T College to clinch the 1963 Central Intercollegiate Athletic Association football championship, 6-0.

Over 10,000 gridiron fans jammed Greensboro's Memorial Stadium, and braved chilly, rainy weather to see the two teams clash in the annual Turkey Day Carolina Classic.

The win by the Eagles left them CIAA conference leaders with a 7-1 record. It also gave Herman Riddick his second CIAA championship in a three-year span. The Eagles won the title in 1963 when they went undefeated with a 6-0-3 record.

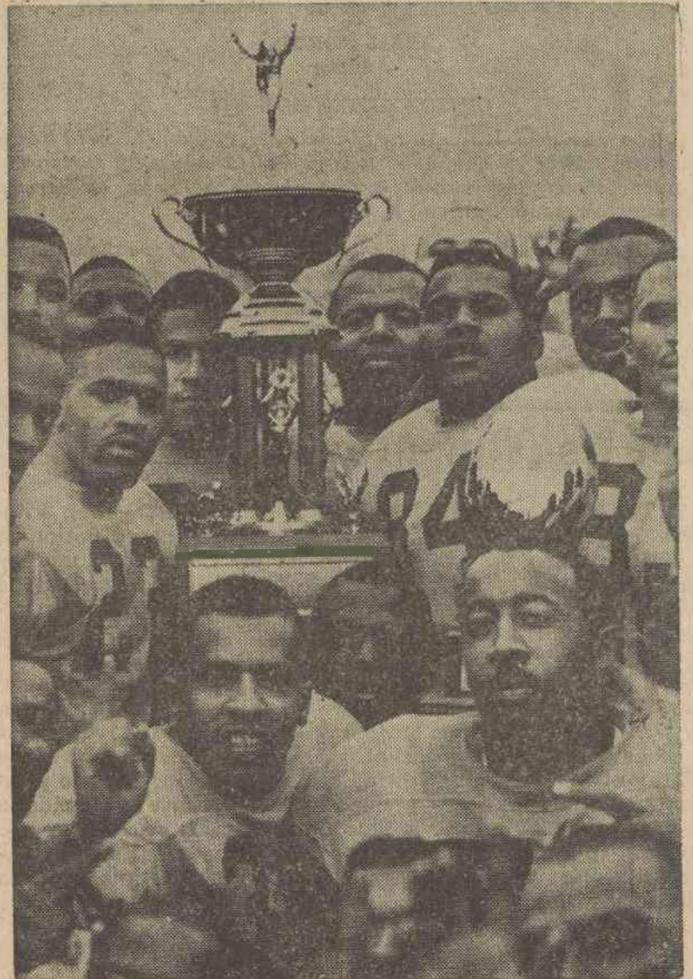

The Aggies, going into the game, were in second place with an identical conference record of 5-1 but with an overall record of 7-2.

In winning this year's classic the Eagles also gained permanent possession of the coveted Bull-Eagles Trophy, a three-foot trophy established jointly by the two state institutions in 1960 to promote good sportsmanship between the schools. NCC had two legs on the prize prior to this year's clash. A. and T. won its only leg last year.

Senior halfback Robert Evans from Winston-Salem, scored the games only score touchdown on a 29-yard pass from end-quarterback Aaron Martin in the first quarter, giving the Eagles a slender lead which proved sufficient to earn them the CIAA title.

NCC Eulogizes John Kennedy

North Carolina College joined the nation in mourning the death of the late John F. Kennedy, thirty-fifth President of the United States, Monday, November 25, in memorial services in the college's R. L. McDougald Gymnasium.

The program, which began at 10 a.m., included a prelude and postlude by the college's band; music by the college choir; an invocation by the Rev. Melvin C. Swann, pastor of St. Joseph's A. M. E. Church, Durham; remarks by Fulton D. Hayes, vice president of the Student Government Association; reading of a poem, "O Captain, My Captain," by Dr. J. Neal Hughley, college minister; and a benediction by the Rev. Henry Elkins.

NCC President Samuel P. Massie, who presided, delivered the principal remarks, a tribute to the memory of the late President. He looked upon the death of the President as a loss in far-reaching areas.

"The nation has lost a great leader. The world has lost an outstanding statesman and peacemaker. Education has lost a devoted servant. And the Negro people have lost a tried and true friend," he declared.

Dr. Massie expressed best wishes to President Lyndon B. Johnson in the trying days ahead.

In commemoration of the life and death of President Kennedy, the college suspended all social activities for the weekend, cancelling a student-sponsored variety program and an intra-squad basketball game.

During the day of the memorial services, all classes and other college activities were suspended.

Former U. S. Ambassador Urges Students' Contribution To World

Dr. John H. Morrow, former ambassador to the Republic of Guinea, now director of the U. S. foreign service officers' training program, speaking here Nov. 15, urged North Carolina College students to attempt to make a contribution to Western willingness to understand and assist the underprivileged of the world.

Morrow, who headed the NCC Department of Romance Languages from 1956-59, leaving to accept the diplomatic post, addressed the college's forum assembly on the subject, "The Time is Now."

Speaking of career opportunities in various federal agencies and the State Department, he congratulated students upon their being in college preparing themselves to make contributions to the American scene and to the world.

"Your parents have realized—and don't you ever forget this—that for each generation there are more and more doors open," he said.

"The wiser among us have made the important discovery," he continued, "that college is not a dull waiting room, where students passively mark time until the moment arrives to file out into a few handpicked professions."

Although students are reaping the benefits of a reassessment of education in the United States, spurred on several years ago by Russia's launching of Sputniks, no crash program has been devised, Morrow said, which can eliminate the importance of the mastery of details (See Ex-Prof. Urges, page 3)

National Teachers Examination Set For North Carolina College Feb. 15

North Carolina College seniors planning to teach school will be able to take the National Teacher Examinations on February 15, 1964. This date for the annual nationwide administration of tests for prospective teachers was announced last month by Educational Testing Service, a non-profit agency which also prepares College Board and graduate school admissions tests.

Scores on the National Teacher Examinations are used by many large school districts for employing new teachers, and by several States for granting teaching certificates, licenses. Some colleges require all seniors preparing to teach to take the tests. Lists of school systems which use the examinations are being distributed by Educational Testing Service to colleges educating teachers.

More than 400 testing centers have been set up throughout the nation for the February 15 examinations. At the full-day session, future teachers may take the Common Examinations, testing their professional knowledge and general educational (See Exam Slated, page 4)

NCC BAND MEMBERS MAP FINAL PLANS for their 1963 performance at Yankee Stadium in New York City. The band will perform at the halftime of the football game between the New York Giants and the Washington Redskins. This will mark the band's second jaunt to New York since being under the piloting of Richard H. L. Jones. The first trip was made in 1961.
