-Dr. Massie's Address-

educate people for service and be of service itself.

Our students have shown their willingness to participate in the struggle for freedom — indeed, to lead, and they may have to again and again, for the forces of bigotry and prejudice are not yet conquered. But protest alone must not be the answer of the educated man. After every revolution there must be statesmen to take advantage of the gains. Having opened the doors of opportunity, we must now produce students, as indeed we are doing, but in much greater quantity, capable of fulfilling the role in society demanded of free men. Our students and alumni must continue to fill places of leadership where they serve. We who are educated have the obligation to serve those who are not as fortunate as we.

We must be tolerant in a world of intolerance; understanding in a world of cross purposes; honest in a world of insincerity. In the words of the late Charles S. Johnson, "Tolerance means respect for facts — including the facts of human nature — patience, forbearance, self-restraint, suspended judgment, a due humility on the value of one's judgment and opinions in relation to those of other peoples."

Human understanding is a must. In this day of urgent educational adjustment, at this time of challenge and change, among our many achievements, we hope there will be progressive results and gains in human understanding and togetherness and measurable gains in educational, social and economic progress for all peoples. Our concern must not be limited to our college, our state, our nation. We must be ever aware of the increasing importance of world affairs. "No man is an island" said Donne. Well, neither is a college.

Finally, I believe that educated people ought live on a high plan of personal moral integrity. I believe with Markham that

We are all fools until we know That in the common plan Nothing is worth the building If it does not build the man. Why build these temples glorious

If man unbuilds goes? We build the world in vain Unless the builder also grows.

North Carolina College must insist as it always has on the best possible behavior of all who serve it. Dr. Shepard in one of his memorable speeches before the state legislature stated that one of the best reasons for North Carolina College was "that educated men behave better than uneducated men." North Carolina College must ever build men and women who, in the words of Holland, "live above the fog in public duty and in private thinking."

This, then, is our role in a world of challenge and change. The task we face is not easy — but we do not come unprepared.

First, we have inherited a great tradition of quality education, based on the search for truth in order that man may better serve. We live in a state greatly concerned with improvement in education. We have a wise and experienced Board of Trustees. We have a good faculty and fine students. Persons who have passed through our doors, either as faculty or students, serve well all over the world. And we have a most valuable asset as testified by your presence here today — the good will of friends.

And, finally, we take great comfort from the words of the prophet Isaiah, "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run and not be weary; and they shall walk and not faint."

With this reassurance of divine assistance, with a rededication to Truth and Service and in the spirit of those who love learning, I formally accept the presidency of the North Carolina College at Durham with all the rights, privileges and responsibilities thereunto appertaining.
