And there is another thing I want you to remember about your college education. It is not automatically going to make you a better person. I believe it is safe to say that each person who pursues courses in formal education is changed in some way. You, too, will be changed, even those of you who may never get your degrees for some reason. But unfortunately this change is not always for the better. Education has the peculiar characteristic of making one more tolerant, more patient, more broad-minded, and more capable of meeting the challenges of the day or more selfish, more narrow-minded, and more reactionary. We here at North Carolina College hope that all of you are going to be better people as a result of your experiences here.

But all the responsibility is not yours. Some of it rests with what I must call "powers that be". You have the right to expect the most conducive atmosphere possible towards your academic, social, and psychological growth. The world we live in is constantly changing and we must change with it, but we sometimes fail in our duty when we do not see the applicability of this fact to our own particular situation. We are not always aware of the fact that the great wheel of progress is often turned by the working of little ones.

And so on behalf of the Student Government and the student body, it is my very great pleasure to welcome you to the sloping hills and the verdant green, which we do not walk upon, the lovely blossoms' beauteous sheen, which we admire with our eyes and noses and not with our hands, and the maroon and the grey which we proudly proclaim.

Perry Attends Church Seminar

PHILADELPHIA—A North Carolina College student was among a group of twenty-four college students, predominantly Negro, from around the country who participated in a seminar in New York City from September 2 through 9.

The student Raymond Perry, was especially selected to attend the week long session that was sponsored by the Division of Vocation of the Board of Christian Education of The United Presbyterian Church U S A. During the week, the delegates saw first-hand what the church is doing as it attempts to be relevant to the many forms of revolution going on in today's world.

The week's schedule included discussions with leaders of some of the Board's Agencies of the United Presbyterian Church that are housed in the Interchurch Center. Outstanding among these sessions was one with Dr. Eugene Carson Blake, State Clerk of the General Assembly and its chief executive officer.

There were visits to two United Presbyterian churches in Harlem that are carrying on an effective ministry to the surrounding community. Then in a session at the American Broadcasting Company's television studios, the students heard of the kinds of frontier programming that the church is doing through its Division of Radio and Television.

Dr. Clifford Earle, the United Presbyterian Secretary for International Affairs who has the status of a Non-Governmental Observer at the United Nations, arranged a discussion with the Hon. Waldo Emerson Waldron-Ramsey, delegate to U N from Tanganyika. A lawyer, educated in Great Britain, Mr. Waldron-Ramsey drew on his wide knowledge of world history to provide insight and analysis to what is going on in Africa and how it has reflected what is going on in the United States.

From this session, the group went to New York's Municipal Building where they met with the President of the Borough Council of Manhattan, the Hon. Edward R. Dudley. Mr. Dudley, a Johnson C. Smith University graduate and a Presbyterian layman, shared some of his personal background with the students.

The next hot day, he went over to play with John, and he said to John's mother, "Please, Ma'm, may I try a nice cool slice of watermelon?"

John's mother said, "Why Rodney, David's mother told me you didn't like watermelon." She gave him a nice cool slice, and he ate it all up.

But he decided he wouldn't say anything to Bill's mother. He didn't want everybody along the street to think that now he liked watermelon—maybe some day he wouldn't like it again. And he decided he had a right to change his mind even if that did make people feel mixed up.

A. & T. Aggies Meet Tenn. State

GREENSBORO—The A & T College Aggies and the Tennessee State University Tigers tied in a big intersection of football games here on Saturday night, September 26. Kick-off time has been set for 8:00 P. M. at the Greensboro Memorial Stadium.

The game originally scheduled for the afternoon, is being moved under the arcs, according to Dr. William Bell A & T's College Athletic Director.

The Aggies will be looking for their third win in a row over the Tigers, a team which they defeated both in 1962 and 1963 for the first time in eight starts.
