Nat'l. Teachers Exam Set For July

North Carolina College has been designated as a test center for administering the National Teacher Examinations on July 1, 1967, Dr. F. G. Shipman announced recently.

College seniors preparing to teach and teachers applying for positions in school systems which encourage or require applicants to submit their scores on the National Teacher Examinations along with their other credentials are eligible to take the tests. The examinations are prepared and administered by Educational Testing Service, Princeton, New Jersey.

The designation of North Carolina College as a test center for these examinations will give prospective teachers in this area an opportunity to compare their performance on the examinations with candidates throughout the country who take the tests, Dr. Shipman said.

Freshman Holds News Conference

On May 18, 1967, Percy A. Peele, II, president of the Freshman Class and his vice-president, Kenneth J. Peele, held a news conference in B. N. Duke Auditorium. It was the first time in the 57-year-old history of North Carolina College, that such an event had occurred.

The purpose of the news conference was to inform the college community and the community-at-large of the achievements of the Peele administration, and to inform the students of the dreams and aspirations of the Freshman Class. To that end of informing the freshman students of what is occurring on the campus, monthly news bulletins have been issued. At this conference the members of the 1966-67 Freshman Class, who had maintained an accumulative index number of 3.000 or better, and the members who were in the various extra-curricular activities (Drama Club, Glee Club, etc.) were asked to stand up and be recognized by everyone present.

An invitation to this affair was sent to Dr. Albert Whiting, the newly elected President of North Carolina College.

It was brought out at this news conference that this Freshman Class is the first to write a class constitution. At the one-day session a candidate may take the Common Examinations, which include tests in Professional Education and General Education, and one of the thirteen Teaching Area Examinations which are designed to evaluate his understanding of the subject matter and methods applicable to the area he may be assigned to teach

Bulletins of Information describing registration procedures and containing Registration Forms may be obtained from Dr. F. G. Shipman, Room 109 Education Building, North Carolina College, Durham, North Carolina, or directly from National Teacher Examinations, Educational Testing Service, Box 911, Princeton, New Jersey. Prospective teachers planning to take the test should obtain their Bulletins of Information promptly, Dr. Shipman

Profile Made On NCC Swifters

Here is what the experts say about the NCC Thinclads: These men have shown and will continue to show the ability, talent, and skills necessary to make themselves acknowledgeable and also to make NCC known as the school that produced them.

The NCC trackmen are relatively young but continue to improve with experience. They should do much better in the future because they have not reached their peak of performance yet.

The "C h u c k s", "Skips", "Tonys" will be back again next year doing what they know best —running for the sound of fire.

Let us all recognize the fact that North Carolina College does have one of the best track teams in the country, in spite of the fact that the rewards for performing are few and quite unimpressive to a great number of potential Eagles who go to other schools. Hats off to the men of speed!

Speaker Praises Negro Lawyers

A 1964 graduate of the North Carolina College Law School said May 1 that Negro lawyers have been for the past century the men most committed to the relief of human distress.

Maynard H. Jackson, Jr., an attorney in the Atlanta office of the National Labor Relations Board, said that especially during the past 30 years it might have been said of the Negro attorney that "never have so few done so much for so many with so little for so long and for such a small return."

The tradition of the Negro attorney in service to humanity began, Jackson said, in 1844 when Macon B. Alben became the first attorney admitted to practice from the Negro race, in Maine, and has continued until the present, with Thurgood Marshall named in 1966 as the first Negro solicitor general of the United States.

In the past 30 years, Jackson noted, Negro lawyers have asked many of the most probing questions of the U.S. Supreme Court. They asked, he said, if the Negro is entitled to due process, if the Negro should be expected to support a school system which relegates him to inferior facilities, if separate facilities are not inherently unequal, if it is the Negro's due to be denied the exercise of the right which is the essence of democracy—the right to vote.

The answers to these qestions constitute a revolution, he said.

These accomplishments have

Law Student Gets National Office

Charles Edward Houston, Jr. of the North Carolina College Law School was elected to office of national vice president of the American Law Student Association for the Fourth Circuit. He will succeed Vincent F. Ewell, Jr. of Wiliam and Mary Law School to this position. The election took place on Saturday, April 8 at the annual ALSA French Circuit Conference held at the downtown Holiday Inn.

Charles Houston as the National Vice President will represent all the law schools of the Fourth Circuit at the joint annual meeting of the American Bar Association and American Law Students Association to be held in Honolulu, Hawaii in August

The Fourth Circuit is composed of the Law Schools of South Carolina, North Carolina, West Virginia, and Virginia. The schools are U. S. C., Wake Forest, UNC, Duke, NCC, W. Virginia, Washington and Lee University, University of Richmond, University of Virginia and William and Mary.

Charles Houston was born in Hilton Head Island, South Carolina. He attended Tuckahoe High School in Westchester County, Eastchester, New York. He majored in philosophy and history in undergraduate school at Boston University and North Carolina College. This is his junior year at the NCC Law School. In addition to Law School, Charles plans to study toward his Masters in Business Administration at Columbia University in New York.

Charles and his wife, Maria Innoconcia Houston are from New York city. His father, Rev. Charles E. Houston, Sr. is pastor of the Shiloh Baptist Church, Tuckahoe, New York; his mother is a teacher with the New York City Board of Education.

A 1964 graduate of the come in the face of great adverorth Carolina College Law sity, Jackson said.

Not the least of these was the Negro's own prejudiced stereotype of the Negro lawyer. Accustomed to the idea that the Negro is inferior, Negroes took "crumbs of litigation to the Negro attorney, tendering the full loaf to his white counterpart."

Particularly guilty of this, Jackson said, is the Negro businessman, who has historically dealt almost exclusively through white attorneys, despite the presence of competent Negro professionals in the community.

There remain many roadblocks to the success of the Negro attorney, Jackson said. He noted that North Carolina, among other states, still maintains a bar association which excludes Negroes because of their

"My message is not one of despair." the speaker said. "My desire is that the Negro lawyer continue to manifest the commitment of the Negro lawyers of today and of years past to meet the cry of distress of the disenfranchised and underprivileged with actions consistent with this commitment to the rule of law."

Among the ways in which the Negro attorney can become more successful, Jackson said, is through the abandonment of his role as a "loner." Law firms would afford him an opportunity "to exercise the collective knowledge and concerted ability, the influence and the power, necessary today for an effective and thorough representation of the interests of his clients.

"However, it is only through a continued assertion of and commitment to the principle of the rule of law that we can as a profession and as individuals extricate ourselves from the absurdity of an unexamined and unjust life. All lawyers,
