

Charles H. Frenzel Appointed Superintendent

The appointment of Charles H. Frenzel as Superintendent of Duke Hospital was announced in July by President Hollis Edens. Mr. Frenzel, who had been assistant superintendent of the Hospital since April, 1956, assumed his new duties upon announcement of his appointment.

The appointment of Mr. Frenzel was made upon the recommendation of Dr. W. C. Davison, dean of the Medical School, and the Medical Center's Committee on Health Affairs. Dean Davison describes Mr. Frenzel as "one of the most able men we could have found to direct the operation of the hospital. We are fortunate to have had a man of his competence and experience already on the staff. He is a graduate of our training program for hospital administrators and is thoroughly familiar with the operation of the hospital and Medical Center. We are delighted that he has agreed to accept this major position of responsibility."

Before coming to Duke in 1956, Mr. Frenzel had served as director of the North Carolina Hospital Study Committee of the Commission on Financing Hospital Care. In this capacity, he directed the work of national field personnel in a pilot project conducted as part of a study of financing hospital care in the United States. He later became director of a similar study sponsored by the South Carolina Hospital and Medical Associations. Previous hospital administrative posts which preceded his 1956 appointment at Duke were at City Memorial Hospital in Winston-Salem, where he was assistant director for a year, and at Bedford County Memorial Hospital, Bedford, Virginia, where he spent two and a half years as administrator.

Currently an associate professor of hospital administration at Duke in addition to his administrative duties, he is a member of professional groups that include the American Hospital Association and American Public Health Association.

A native of Jamaica, Long Island, New York, Mr. Frenzel received the A.B. degree and completed a year of graduate work at Duke University before entering Duke Hospital's administrative training program in 1949. He served four and a half years in the U.S. Army Signal Corps during World War II and held the rank of

New Appointments Broaden Pediatric Care

Dr. Galen W. Quinn, appointed associate professor of orthodontics in July, is the first orthodontist to serve on the Duke Staff. Dr. Quinn came here from the University of Tennessee College of Dentistry in Memphis where he was head of the Department of Pedodontics (children's dentistry).

Dr. Quinn's activities at Duke, in addition to teaching and orthodontics practice, will include work in conjunction with Duke plastic surgeons on cleft palate cases and in conjunction with the Surgery Department's Division of Medical Speech Pathology on mouth conditions that cause defective speech. He will also conduct research in orthodontics.

Born in Tama, South Dakota, Dr. Quinn holds the D.D.S. degree from the Creighton University School of Dentistry and the M.S. degree in orthodontics from the University of Tennessee College of Dentistry. He served on the Tennessee faculty from 1955 until coming to Duke.

The appointment, effective September 1, of Dr. Robert S. Stempfel, Jr. as assistant professor of pediatrics in charge of pediatric endocrinology marks a further broadening of pediatric care in the Duke Medical Center. Born in Indianapolis, Dr. Stempfel took his premedical education at Wabash College, Crawfordsville, Indiana; Vanderbilt University, Nashville, Tennessee; and the University
