

As soon as a newborn baby leaves the delivery room he goes right into the care of pediatrics' specially trained nurses. Here a wee one is introduced to the art of bottle-drinking.

Little Eugene Ayscue of Rocky Mount looks sick and sad, but with a little love from Mrs. R. L. Tuthill of the Duke Hospital Auxiliary he'll soon be enjoying the well stocked new playroom on Howland Ward. This playroom will also be used as a classroom for the in-teaching program for ambulatory patients.

This spacious play patio enables young patients to enjoy sunshine and recreation as they progress toward recovery on Howland Ward. Adjoining the ward, the patio is being furnished by the Duke Hospital Auxiliary, whose members also will assist nurses in supervising the use of the area.

Duke photos by Sparks