Employees

Medical Center will have five representatives while the maintenance department will have two and the rest of the university five.

Polling places will be located in Room 3031 of the Medical Center and in Room 01A of the Union Building on the West Campus and in the hallway of the East Duke Building on the East Campus. Polls will be open from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Tuesday, October 15. Nonacademic employees will be released from work to vote during regular working hours.

Nomination petitions of nonacademic employees seeking election as representatives on the council were due September 20. A list of eligible candidates for the election will be circulated next week.

Those candidates receiving the highest number of votes shall be declared elected, provided they have received a simple majority of the votes cast. Remaining seats in each voting unit for which no candidate has a majority will be decided by a run-off election October 22.

No more than one person from any department may be elected regardless of the candidate's vote total. However, any department which has 25 per cent or more of the eligible voters in its voting unit may have two persons elected and any department with 50 per cent or more of the eligible voters may have three representatives.

Employees selected for the council will hold meetings during regular working hours. The first meeting will convene as soon as possible after the run-off election ballots are counted.

The purposes of the council, as defined in a memorandum from the University administration to nonacademic employees, include the following:

1. to afford nonacademic regular full-time employees (other than supervisory employees) the opportunity, through elected representatives, to provide an open forum for employee discussion and recommendations
2. to receive individual employee suggestions for review and debate, with resultant recommendations
3. to select faculty members to sit as members of the Duke University Employee Relations Advisory Committee and to propose a list of five additional faculty members from which the administration will select one to sit as a member of DUERAC
4. to appoint, from time to time, such study groups as it feels appropriate
5. to express themselves as groups on matters relating to their working conditions

DUERAC has been established as a mediation committee for matters where the administration and the Employees' Council have failed to reach agreement. The committee will review issues and make recommendations if necessary. The recommendations will become effective unless vetoed by the president of the university within 30 days.

DUERAC will consist of five members, two chosen by the Employees' Council, two by the University administration and one by mutual consent. A permanent DUERAC will be selected as soon as the Employees' Council convenes.
