

T and C Division Employees Fund Drive To Hold Open Meeting Nets $4,500

The Technical and Clerical Division of the Duke University Nonacademic Employees' Council will hold an open meeting for all employees represented by the division Feb. 12. The session will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of the Old Chemistry Building.

The division, which has adopted a constitution and a set of bylaws, is presently working on establishment of effective means of communication between the division and the employees it represents.

Liaison between the T and C Division and the administration will be maintained through the policy committee of the division and the University Personnel Policy Committee. T and C Division policy committee members include Miss Sheila Smith, chairman, Miss Rebecca Cowan, and Mr. James Scott.

Members of the Personnel Policy Committee include Mr. Charles B. Huestis, vice-president for business and finance;

Mr. E. C. Bryson, university counsel; Mr. William Linke, director of personnel; Dr. Stuart M. Sessoms, director of Duke Hospital, and Dr. John C. McKinney, chairman of the Department of Sociology and Anthropology.

The entire Employees' Council, which includes the technical and clerical branch as well as the Service and Maintenance Division recently named Dr. Jack Preiss, associate professor of sociology, and Dr. John Buettner-Janusch, professor of anatomy and zoology, as its two nominees to the Duke University Employee Relations Advisory Committee.

DUERAC, which will serve to review matters of disagreement between the Employees' Council and the administration, will consist of five members—two selected by the council, two named by the university administration and one chosen by mutual consent. The other three nominees have been named and are awaiting final approval by University President Douglas M. Knight.

More than $4,500 has been contributed to the medical center's "Friends of Duke Hospital" fund drive for the support of indigent patients. The campaign was organized in December to help alleviate the financial strain put on the hospital by the large number of non-paying patients who come to Duke for treatment.

Letters were sent to some 2,200 former Duke patients by their doctors working in the private diagnostic clinics. Approximately five per cent of the former patients asked sent contributions ranging from $1 to $1,000. The total number of contributors stands at 110, but checks are still arriving. Acknowledgment letters are sent to each person by the Office of Public Relations.

A final report and suggestions for future fund drives to support indigent patients are expected this month.
