

Two Symposia Held at Hospital

Cancer

Nearly 30 faculty and staff doctors from Duke and several other medical institutions presented a symposium on "Problems and Progress in Cancer Control" April 30-May 1-2 at the medical center.

Sponsored by the School of Medicine and the N. C. Regional Medical Program, the program was aimed at practicing internists, radiotherapists, surgeons and oncologists.

Sessions were held on environmental health and carcinogenesis, early detection of cancer, history and results of treatment of common neoplasms, biochemical aspects, and chemotherapy.

Neurology

Physicians and researchers from medical institutions throughout the country and abroad participated in a symposium on "Molecular Aspects of Neural Transmission" May 15 and 16 at the medical center.

It was the fifth annual symposium sponsored by the Duke Research Training Program in Sciences Related to the Nervous System. Members of the Duke medical faculty chaired each of the three sessions each day.

P. D. C. ON THE MOVE—Surgical P. D. C. employes help move a large adding machine into the clinic's new offices on the first floor. (staff photo)

GUEST AT DUKE—Dr. Julio de Leon, dean of the faculty of medical sciences at the University of San Carlos in Guatemala, speaks with Dr. William G. Anlyan, associate provost for medical affairs and dean of the School of Medicine, right, and Dr. E. Croft Long, associate dean for undergraduate medical education, left. Dr. de Leon was guest of honor at the luncheon following the 1969 Hippocratic Oath Ceremony June 1. (photo by Tom Knight)

Med Awards

(continued from page one)

Seven men were selected to join three other seniors as members of Alpha Omega Alpha, medical honorary. The three students named to the honorary in their junior year were Dwight Phelps Cruikshank, IV, Richard David Gentzler and David Lee Valle.

The other new members include Richard Hoyt Dixon, Charles Stephen Foster, Bruce Carl Horten, Roy Conrad Haberkern, III, Stephen Andrew Koff, William G. Moorefield, Jr., and David Michael Waggoner.

C. V. Mosby Book Awards, given to the top five students during their senior year, went to Charles Bruce Malone, III, Dr. Cruikshank, Dr. Haberkern, Richard Bruce Karsh and Don Jobe Jackson.

Commencement speaker and winner of the Roche Award for the senior with the highest grade average over four years was Dr. Valle. He, along with Mary Hagan Morriss, also won the Lange Medical Publications Award.

The Thomas Jefferson Award, given periodically for outstanding achievement in extra-curricular activities, was given to Dr. Hoover.

Public Relations Office
Box 3354
Duke University Medical Center
Durham, North Carolina
27706