Nursing Staff Organizes New Service, Social Club

The medical center's late night nursing staff has organized a new service and social group, the Night Owl Club.

The club, now boasting between 60 and 75 members, is properly named, since its entire membership works from 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. on the hospital wards.

Lawrence Davis, PCA on Minot and president of the organization, explained that its purpose is to be able to do something for individual employes without having to run around the hospital taking up a collection.

With monthly dues paid by the members, the club sends flowers or a gift to members who are ill, buys wedding presents for members getting married and marks many other individual special occasions. Last month, the group held a retirement party for Mrs. Minnie Woods, who was formerly employed in central supply.

The club will sponsor a picnic for all members later this month and a Christmas party is already in the planning stages.

Registered nurses, licensed practical nurses, patient care aides and private duty personnel are eligible to join.

Officers of the group in addition to Mr. Davis include Donald Newman, PCA, vice-president; Mrs. Katie Evans, R. N., secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Mable R. Easter, R. N., assistant secretary-treasurer, and Mrs. Margaret Blanchard, ward clerk, planning and social chairman.

Advisers are Mrs. Elsie Vaughan and Mrs. Velma Rohla, both R. N.'s.

Former Administrator Gets HEW Grant Job

A former assistant director of the hospital has been appointed assistant project director for a two-year study of old-age medical insurance under the direction of the Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

Howard R. Veit, who resigned his position at Duke earlier this year, will work under a $210,000 grant titled "A Research Study to Determine the Influences the Social Security Act, As Amended, Has Had and Will Have on Teaching Hospitals."

Last summer Dr. Anlyan was appointed to the Board of Regents of the National Library of Medicine by former President Lyndon B. Johnson. Later in the year, he was chosen chairman of the Council of Deans of the Association of

18 New Student Administrators Work on Wards

Eighteen students have arrived at the medical center to begin work in the two-year Graduate Program in Hospital Administration.

But their summer activities are different from those of first-year students in the past.

The men are serving as ward administrative assistants, working directly with head nurses, helping them with administrative non-nursing functions and providing them more time for direction of patient care. Jack Bovender, administrative assistant, is coordinating the summer program.

The students are Richard Dean Andruk of Athens, Ga.; William Charles Bentley, Winter Haven, Fla.; Paul Frederick Betzold, Jr., Atlanta, Ga.; James Lawrence Dozier, Chattanooga, Tenn.; Paul Bryan Eckel, Philadelphia, Pa.; Mark I. Feldman, Far Rockaway, N. Y.; Dahl Toland Gardner, Afton, Wyo; James E. Hamilton, McMinnville, Ore.; Jean Baptiste LaFond, Upland, Calif.; Richard Francis Minicucci, Seaford, N. Y.; Phillip Donald Muhlemthaler, Cedar Grove, N. J.; Stacy Arnold Nunnery, Stedman, N. C.; Donald Duncan Sandoval, Alpoca, W. Va.; Michael Joel Schwartz, Youngstown, Ohio; Douglas James Seaver, North Lebanon, Me.; Paul Martin Wiles, Bethesda, Md.; Daniel James Wooley, Cleveland Heights, Ohio, and Larry Henry Young of Topeka, Kan.
