

84 Med Freshmen Start Basic Science Courses

Eighty-one men and three women make up the Class of 1973 in the Duke School of Medicine.

North Carolina has the largest state representation with 12 students. In all, the freshmen come from 29 states, the District of Columbia, Canada and Taiwan.

The class is the 40th to enter the school. Their course of study will follow the new curriculum begun in 1965 to provide more flexibility in medical education.

The curriculum consists of two core years, including primary courses in basic medical sciences the first year and introductions to clinical specialties at Duke Hospital the second year. The third and fourth years of study are entirely elective courses in both basic sciences and clinical work.

Included in this year's entering class are 11 students who are working under Duke's Medical Scientist Training Program. This plan allows them to earn both the M. D. degree and a doctorate in one basic medical sciences in six to seven years.

Dr. Elchlepp Is Assistant In VP Office

Dr. Jane G. Elchlepp, assistant dean for planning at the Medical Center for the past three and one-half years, has been named to a post in the office of the University's Vice President for Health Affairs.

Announcement of the promotion was made earlier this month by Dr. Marcus E. Hobbs, provost of the University.

Dr. Elchlepp will be working with Dr. William G. Anlyan as an assistant for planning and analysis. She retains her title as associate professor of pathology.

In her new position, Dr. Elchlepp will plan, organize, direct, control and evaluate planning activities at the Medical Center and supervise design and use of future construction.

Dr. Elchlepp joined the Duke faculty in 1962 after earning her M. D. degree from the University of Chicago in 1955. A native of St. Louis, she also holds M. S. and Ph. D. degrees in zoology from the State University of Iowa.
