

Davison Society Appoints Three

John C. Alexander, Jr., David R. Garr and Terry L. Hankey were appointed to new positions in the medical school's student government recently. Douglas S. Lloyd, president of the Davison Society, announced that the three would be the society's representatives to three medical organizations.

Mr. Alexander is the new representative to the Medical Society of the State of North Carolina. He will serve on their Advisory Committee on Student American Medical Association Chapters in North Carolina. He is currently a third-year medical student and president of his class.

Mr. Garr will sit on the Durham-Orange County Medical Society's Executive Committee as the representative of the Davison Society. He is currently the treasurer of the society and a third-year student.

Mr. Hankey, also a third-year student, is the new Davison Society representative to the North Carolina Academy of General Practice. He recently returned to Durham from Ohio where he spent 10 weeks working with general practitioners under the sponsorship of the Miami (Ohio) County Medical Society.

POPE PAUL GREETES THE ANYLYANS—A private audience with Pope Paul VI was the high point of a trip to Europe and the Middle East last month by Dr. and Mrs. William G. Anylan, shown here, being greeted by the Pope at his summer residence outside Rome. Dr. Anylan, vice president for health affairs, headed a three-week mission to Poland, Yugoslavia, Israel and Italy for the National Library of Medicine. He serves on its Board of Regents.
