Duke Nursing Grad Students Plan Seminar

Graduate students at the Duke School of Nursing have scheduled a seminar titled "Change, Does It Involve You?" Jan. 12-14 at the Quail Roost conference center near Durham.

The object of the seminar is to explore some of the directions and goals open to highly educated nurses in their roles as innovators in the nursing profession and in society in general.

Participants will include some 15 graduate nursing students and members of the Duke School of Nursing graduate faculty.

The principal guest speakers for the meeting will be Dr. James Dickoff and his wife, Dr. Patricia James, both associate professors of philosophy at Kent State University. Their presentation on "What is Change—The Philosophy of Change" will begin the conference Wednesday morning.

Elizabeth Tournquist, a Durham journalist whose interests include the emerging role of women in society, will present the afternoon session on Wednesday.

Jessie Pergrin, a registered nurse who is working on a doctoral degree at the University of North Carolina, and Celia Lamper, a Duke faculty member who is a pediatric nurse practitioner, will begin Thursday's session with a discussion on "The Changing Role of the Nurse, the Profession." Thursday afternoon will include general discussions of the presentations by all conference participants.

Drs. Dickoff and James will lead discussions on "Action for Change" during the Friday session.

They will remain in Durham on Saturday to participate in the School of Nursing's forum on "Iconoclasm in Nursing and the Philosophic Approach."

BEHIND THE SCENES—Staff members and employees pitched in to help get the Hospital cafeteria's new fast food scatter line into operation last week. This side of the cafeteria now serves hot and cold sandwiches, french fries, salads, desserts, and beverages. When the switch-over was made, the Dietetics Department announced that the scatter line would remain open from 7:30 a.m. to 11 p.m. seven days a week with just a half-hour clean-up break from 3 to 3:30 p.m. Employees can get coffee and sweet rolls in the scatter section from 7:30 to 10:30 a.m., with full service beginning at 10:30. BIG DECISIONS—These employees were among the first to take advantage of the Hospital cafeteria's new fast food section. In the new section, an employee picks up his selections and goes directly to the cashier. There is no waiting in lines. The remainder of the cafeteria will continue to offer a large selection of hot entrees, vegetables, and dozens of other items by the traditional line method during regular meal hours.
