Hanes Addition Now Underway

Workmen have just begun construction on one of the Medical Center's newest building projects—an addition to Hanes House.

The one-story, 15,000-square foot facility, located adjacent to the south side of Hanes, will house faculty and staff offices, lecture hall, conference rooms, and the Dean of Nursing's suite for her office and staff.

The new building will be made of concrete and stucco finish and trimmed with Duke's traditional Hillsborough stone. The designers are the architectural firm of Carr, Harrison, Pruden and DePasquale.

The building contractor, C. T. Wilson Construction Company, Inc., has scheduled the facility for completion in November of 1972.

The Hanes addition, which has been under planning since 1970, will be funded in chief by a $308,759 federal grant from the National Institutes of Health. The Medical Center also received $200,000 from the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation and $58,000 from the Duke Endowment. The building cost is estimated at $571,468.

Mrs. Dorothy Brundage, assistant professor of nursing and chairman of the Facilities Committee for the School of Nursing, explained that the building was planned to provide badly needed facilities for teaching. "It will not only improve our educational program," she said, "but it will also consolidate the nursing faculty offices and some instructional facilities."

Hanes House will for the most part be a dormitory, though the library and some faculty offices and classrooms in the south wing will remain there. The new administrative-educational facility will free existing space for additional dormitory use.

Frenzel Heads Pa. Medical Center

Charles H. Frenzel, director of the Graduate Program in Hospital Administration and former administrator of Duke Hospital, left Duke this week to become executive vice president of the Mercy Catholic Medical Center in Philadelphia.

He takes over the position from Frank H. Abbott, the center's legal counsel who has been serving in an acting capacity and who will continue as legal counsel for the 800-bed facility.

Mr. Frenzel will serve as the chief operating officer of the medical center.

Mr. Frenzel holds a professorship in hospital administration at Duke. He served as superintendent of Duke Hospital from 1958 until 1964 when he became administrative director of the Duke Medical Center. In 1967 he assumed expanded responsibilities for direction of the Graduate Program in Hospital Administration.
