

DR. LENOX D. BAKER

Orthopaedic Clinic Named For Dr. Lenox D. Baker

A retired medical center orthopaedic surgeon who served as North Carolina's first Secretary of Human Resources, helped establish the N.C. Cerebral Palsy Hospital and repaired the bones of many an injured athlete in a career spanning more than 30 years will be honored today when the Orthopaedic Outpatient Clinic is renamed for Dr. Lenox D. Baker.

The dedication, recommended by the Department of Surgery and approved by the University Board of Trustees, will be held at 4:45 p.m. in the hospital Amphitheater during Medical Alumni Weekend.

Speakers will include Dr. William G. Anlyan, vice president for health affairs; Dr. J. Leonard Goldner, professor and chief of the Division of Orthopaedic Surgery; Dr. David C. Sabiston Jr., professor and chairman of the Department of Surgery; and Dr. Barnes Woodhall, James B. Duke Professor of Neurosurgery.

A native of Dekalb, Texas, Baker came to Duke from the University of Tennessee as athletic trainer in 1929. He was the first student accepted by Dean Wilburt C. Davison into the newly-established School of Medicine in 1930, and he was the first physician to be graduated after completing a full four-year course of study.

After an internship and residency at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore, he joined the Duke faculty as an assistant in orthopaedics at the invitation of Dr. J. Deryl Hart, now professor and chairman emeritus of the Department of Surgery and president emeritus of the university.

Baker served as chief of the Division of Orthopaedic Surgery from 1937 until 1967. During the administration of Governor Robert Scott, he was named the state's first Secretary of Human Resources.

Baker was instrumental in the establishment and operation of North Carolina Cerebral Palsy Hospital in Durham and was a member of its board of directors from 1945 until 1949. In 1950 he was appointed its medical director, a position he held until 1971.

In March of 1973, the N.C. General Assembly authorized renaming the facility the Lenox Baker Cerebral Palsy and Crippled Children's Hospital of North Carolina in recognition of his work.

A member and past president of numerous professional organizations, Baker has also been the recipient of many honors including the 1957 President's Award, the American Legion's God and Country Award, the American Medical Association Certificate of Appreciation and the Service to Sports Award from the Atlantic Coast Sports Writers Association.

developed by Busse, has gained international renown. Psychiatrists trained by him have become leaders in academia, research and practice.

Busse, 56, is a native of St. Louis, Mo., and received his bachelor's degree from Westminster College in Fulton, Mo. He earned his M.D. at Washington University in St. Louis in 1942 and interned at St. Louis City Hospital for a year.

His neuropsychiatric training continued while he served in the Army from 1943 to 1946. Busse went to the University of Colorado Medical Center in 1946 as an instructor and senior resident in psychiatry. By 1950 he had earned the rank of full professor and was head of the Division of Psychosomatic Medicine at Colorado General Hospital.

Busse held these posts until 1953, when he came to Duke to head the Department of Psychiatry.

The American Psychiatric Association presented Busse with certificates of Commendation in 1967, 1968, 1969 and 1970. The Gerontological Society, Inc. presented him with a Citation of Merit and an award for Meritorious Contributions to Research in 1968. He was also given the Edward B. Allen Award of the American Geriatrics Society in 1967 and the Pennsylvania Hospital's Strecker Award in the same year for his research.

In 1971 the American College of Physicians awarded Busse its highest honor, the William C. Menninger Memorial Award, given in recognition of distinguished contributions to the science of mental health.

He was one of 10 medical educators and researchers who received 1972 Distinguished Achievement Awards from Modern Medicine, a leading medical journal.

Busse has published more than 130 scientific articles, most of them on various aspects of aging. The aging center which he established here in 1957 was the nation's first regional center for the study of aging.
