Instead of mere cheapness when you purchase shoes. The value of your purchase does not depend upon what you pay but upon what you get for your money. That's why it is genuine economy to buy your shoes here. It only needs a single trial to convince you of that.

PSEREATAN.

On Friday evening tae united band fi l'siphelians met at the usual nour. This meetmy gave to as anocher new member, bringing with her the glowimg promise of a faitnful worker.
The Prugram consisted of Readings, Original Lompositions, Humorous Selec tions and Music, all of which showed toat the gris had returned with new zeal and a determination to accomphsh greater things in their literary work.
miss Annie Laurle Wicker deserves much credit for giving to us a recitation, "A Negro Sermon," Her expressions were tine, really seemed as if we were in the presence of a colored preacher.
Miss Myrtle Lawrence also displayed much work and thought, in reading to us a prophecy of the Junior English class. which led our thoughts away to the pleasant future, and last but not least came a beautiful and well rendered paper given by Miss Pearl Fogleman, on "How I spent my summer vacation."

CLIO.

The meeting of the Clio Society last Friday evening was very interesting as usual. The programme consisted of many items of importance. They brought to light many interesting things that need our consideration.
Among those items which deserve $s_{1}$,ecial mention were the following: a declamation, by Mr. Thomas; a humorous selection, by Mr. Heatwole; an essay, by Mr. Miller. Nearly all of these men are new men, but they show their interest in society work.

Following these preliminaries was the debate. The query resolved itself thus: That the United States Government should own and control the railroads of our country. This was indeed an interesting question for discussion.
The alfirmative, in an eloquent manner, maintained that if the railroads of our land were owned and controlled by the United States government, all the surplus money, as we might call it, would then go to the treasury of the United States instead of the individual's pocket as it does today. There, as we all know, when it is used it does not benefit one only, but it benefits everybody alike.
 sociation will be a benefit to him, and would have better schedules. For instance, if a wreck would occur on the road between here and Raleigh, another train would be sent at once to carry the mail and those passengers to their proper destination. By so doing better time would be made than is made under the present system, Many other minor points were produced which I will not mention here. The negative came forth with the argument that if the railroads were owned and controlled by the fovernment, taxes would be much higher than they are at present. This they maintained would he destructive to our public sehool system throughout the country. They would have us believe that the term would be shortened. Furthermore they argued that under present conditions there is much competition between railroad companies, and that owing to this fact, we have better roads under the present system than we otherwise would have
The affirmative came out victorious. The best speaker on the affirmative was Mr. W. J. Cotten. Best on the negative, was Mr. C. W. Rountree; oratorically, Mr. Carl B. Riddle.

Corresponding Secretary  ELON vs GUILFORD BASE BALL.

In a game that was anything but pleasing to the backers of the team, the outfit of diamond rushers representing this institution were bested by Guilford College at base ball on the latter's grounds Saturday, September 28, 1912. Ragged flelding of the most ragged sort in the sixth netted the Quakers six runs and they together with one in each the first and third tell the story that no one cares to repeat.
Malone for Elon pitched gilt edge ball until it was evident to him and all witnessing that there was not a semblance of support in the infield except for Newman, at third, and flashes of class by Ingle at first. Newman despite the association, put up a game worthy of any third sacker in the State, but one swallow does not make a summer neither can one Newman make ball team.
Forget it, please

"The Greeks," remarks a current writer, "pictured Opportunity as a half-bald woman with all her hair on her foreheadyou had to grab her from the front; once she had passed, there was nothing to clutch at. Your opportunities have a bald side too."
Yes, you bet they have, and one must look alive or life will be spent looking regretfully after vanishing dreams that might have been cheerful realities. We confess we had silent hysterics over the conceited youth who said the subject of religion had been dismissed from his mind. He had tackled the problem and "after seven hours' intense thought," he had accepted the views of the school of German philosophers. We thought this was a case where he would doubtless have opportunity to think it over again, but in the main his system of concentrated thought and quick deeision was not to be condemned.
It is a good rule to seize the best of what the present offers and let the future work out its own problems. If we were less given to thinking about the future and more given to getting the utmost out of today, it would be better. The awful shadow of what may happen is an opiate that kills more schemes than it safeguards. Some people drift through life-they call it by the deceiving name of Christian acceptance of their lot, when the real name for their conduct is inertia. They only appreciate that opportunities were Heav-
