CHRISTIAN ORPHANAGE

(By E. S. Rainey—Special Correspondent)

The $30,000 baby building which was begun a little over a year ago at the Elon Christian Orphanage has now been completed, and twenty-five youngsters have moved in during the last three weeks. It is a handsome brick structure two stories high with a basement, complete and modern in every detail. There are twenty rooms besides the basement. Four large rooms are fitted up for the little innocents to sleep in. The others are used as school rooms and living rooms for the matrons.

Realizing that the little ones need milk and that in abundance, Superintendent Johnston has had an up-to-date dairy barn constructed. When everything is installed, the cows can be handled to the best advantage and the cleanest and purest kind of milk will be produced.

There are in all seventy-five children being cared for at the Orphanage. Mrs. S. V. Holt has charge of the new building for the babies and Mrs. Lula Witherspoon looks after the main building. The Superintendent is Mr. Chas. D. Johnston. When students visit the Orphanage, as they frequently do, they are always politely and cordially received by these three. Most people look upon the ordinary college student as a species of wild animal to be tolerated if possible. But not so with Mr. Johnston. His kindly eyes and cordial smile always spell welcome to visitors from among the students.

The Orphanage farm comprises one hundred and eighty acres of land. Ninety acres is cultivated and the other is in timber. Mr. Dennis Churchill, a young man raised up at the Orphanage, is manager of the farm. Last year the farm produced 5100 pounds of pork, 350 bushels of sweet potatoes, 125 bushels of Irish potatoes, 255 bushels of wheat, and 100 barrels of corn. Being in the heart of the dry belt, this year's crop of potatoes and vegetables has been almost a failure. During a good season enough food stuff, with the probable exception of wheat, can be raised to feed the seventy-five children and the employees of the institution.

The children of the institution, who are large enough, do all of their own work. The girls do cooking, sewing, mending and laundering; while the boys look after the dairy and the farm, and in this way, practically no hired help is needed.

The first five grades go to school at the Orphanage and the grades above these go to the Elon High School. After they finish the high school, they are allowed to attend the college where tuition is free on account of the fact that both the Orphanage and the College are of the Christian denomination. At present there are two students in the college from the Orphanage. One is a Junior and the other is a Freshman. Several boys and girls in past years have taken advantage of the opportunity and have attended the college.

Those who have become of age and left the Orphanage have been successful in many fields of work from trained nursing to newspaper work. One notable success is Tom Walton, who has a game leg. Many former students of Elon remember him well. He learned shoe-mending while at the Orphanage, and later opened a shop in town. After doing a successful business here for a few years, he moved to Greensboro, N. C., where he now has one of the largest shoe shops in that city.

The singing class is one of the best in any similar institution of the State. The class travels over the country a good deal giving concerts. Last year they took in over $1500. The boys take a great deal of interest in athletics and in the Boy Scouts. Many of them are members of the local Scout troop and some of them have been successful in securing varsity positions on the college teams. Andrews was one of the college baseball pitchers last year.

Mr. Johnston, the Superintendent, is a most interesting and likeable man. He is big and handsome and just in the prime of life. He seems to have the whole of his kind heart in his work. He has been in charge for five years, and he has accomplished great things since he came there. But through modesty he attributes his success to others. "People have been very loyal to me", he said in conversation with the Maroon and Gold correspondent, "Since I have been in charge, we have paid off a large indebtedness, built the new home, installed the dairy and are now out of debt. This has been brought about by the loyalty of the churches, Sunday schools, and friends of the Orphanage children."

"Do you like the work?", he was asked.

"It is wonderful to think of the good that is being done", he replied, "but the work has its disappointments as well as its joys."

He might have said that the work had its romances as well as its worries, for only recently was Mr. Johnston married to Miss Effie Wicher, who has seen seven years of service as one of the matrons of the Orphanage.

"Do you ever get tired of so many students coming over and asking so many questions?"

"Certainly not. We are always glad to have visitors. It encourages us and makes us feel that people are interested in what we do."

Students who desire to see some of the results of the pennies, nickels and maybe dimes that they dropped in the old contribution box back at home, by simply taking five minutes walk from college, may see what a wonderful thing they did in helping to provide a home for the homeless.

A TEMPTATION

(Reprinted from last year's Maroon and Gold by request.)

It was evening time and the lake of blue
Was gold in the western glow,
And the birds sang softly their evening lay
Like the birds that we used to know.
As the sun went down in the far off west,
The gold to a purple turned;
And I thought of the golden dreams of youth
When the fire of love had burned.

I could see, as I sat by the lake so still,
Her hair, and her eyes with their gleam,
And my soul grew sick in that hour of peace,
For I felt 'twas more than a dream.
I could feel the touch of her soft red lips,
And I knew she had played the flirt;

I knew that my heart had been won and scorned,
And, God, how the vision hurt!
I leaned far out o'er the purple lake,
And the tempter laughed with glee,
For he thought he had lured my soul to death,
But the sleep was not for me;
So I rose from my place by the shadowy lake,
And turned on my heel with a curse,
For it's hell to go on, on the long, long trail,
When your heart has ridd'n in the hearse.
