Now we know how an ex-President feels on the day his successor is inaugurated.

Wonder who would kick if Maroon and Gold got in a fight with The Christian Sun?

You needn't worry. So much of the new staff is the same as the old that we are afraid the paper will be just as bad as ever.

The songs of rejoicing which we had planned to sing when it came our time to quit have vanished from our minds. We feel sad.

If the ministerial students can argue as well for the Kingdom of God as they did for the treaty-making power—then, we predict a successful and happy life for them.

The new board fence (partly) around the athletic field is a valuable addition. The boys are to be commended for their work on it. That is the kind of college loyalty that counts.

We spoke our minds about you, Hal Clark. But we must confess that when we see the two, three, and four-sackers flow from your bat, it gives us an inclination to take it all back. Hooray for Chattem, anyhow!

Before replying to the sweeping remarks in this week's issue of the Christian Sun about the Greek letter social clubs at Elon, we are going to let Editor Riddle get some more information on the subject. We don't see how any one could possibly know so little about anything. And, you know, it would be taking an unfair advantage for us to start our debate until our opponent had some material for his side.

What we particularly resent is that the tirade in The Christian Sun places Maroon and Gold in a position such that people outside may infer that we are too yellow to fight the evil influences that are alleged to be fast undermining Elon. Rest assured, Brother Editor, that if your allegations were true, we would have taken up the gauge of battle long ago.

We are proud of our debaters, who won decisions in both debates; but we are not proud of the way they are treated. The only recognition we have been able to perceive is a few individual commendations. Yet we yell ourselves hoarse, and a meal may be interrupted in the dining hall to give the time-worn "fifteen rahs" for an athletic team—several members of which perhaps are dismissed for their failure to pass work. We are heartily in favor of backing our athletic teams—we believe in athletics—but we do think it is time for us to begin to appreciate in at least a small degree intellectual attainments, for that is really the purpose we have, or should have, in coming to college.

"AIN'T WE GOT FUN?"

Wednesday night's doings made us feel that, after all, it wasn't so bad to be a journalist. It is good now and then to have some one like Mrs. Rainey, the sponsor of Maroon and Gold, to really have a cheer-up meeting.

We are sure that it couldn't have been done better anywhere. All the eats and all the decorations were Maroon and Gold just like our little old paper and our college, and it made us feel a lot at home. The contests, too, how homelike they were! And say, didn't we have a time writing up the wedding of Bow-Legs White! We wonder if Mrs. Sturm and Joe didn't frame up on that joke. They must have, or Joe would never have spoken up as he did just at the proper time.

Mrs. Rainey, we want to thank you in our columns for the delightful evening. A friend like you is hard to find when a college journalist starts hunting. While we live and write, we will remember that uniquely planned banquet with all of its fun and good will.

Sion and All the Gang.

RETROSPECTIVE

In looking back over our successes, if we have had any, the retiring staff of Maroon and Gold wish here publicly to express our gratitude to those who have in any way contributed to these successes.

We are exceedingly obliged to our advertisers, for after all is said and done, we know that it would have been impossible for us to bring out the paper without them. While we feel that those who have advertised with us were gainers from a purely business standpoint, yet this fact does not diminish our appreciation for the generous patronage which we received.

We want to let it be known here and now that the Burlington Printing Company, which did the printing of the paper, is without doubt the most efficient, conscientious, and patient concern of its kind that we have done business with. At all times they have been ready to help and to co-operate. From Editor Riddle, of The Sun, to the printers' devil, there was always extended the helping hand.

For a real news nose, Mr. C. M. Cannon cannot be beaten. He rooted out everything around here that looked like news, and he let us have it written in fine style.

Professor Cotten, the faculty adviser, has been indeed an adviser. Never once has he turned his advisory capacity into a censorship. For this we are very thankful. Otherwise discouragement would have captured and destroyed our enthusiasm somewhere near the beginning.

These and other things have helped us to carry out our purpose of presenting the news of the college in the most attractive way possible. Thanks to everybody! Merci bien!

DEPARTED WITHOUT SYMPATHY

At last it seems that the students of Elon have arrived at a point in their upward progress where they will no longer tolerate the ingratitude of a bunch of lazy athletes. That is what we have needed for a long time. It appears that we have turned over a new leaf, and will no longer (as the saying is) allow athletes "to get away with murder."

In the past when someone was debarred from a team student sentiment was so much in his favor that by petitions, or some "hook of a crook," he would eventually be reinstated. But the bigoted athlete who loafs on his job and fails to make a grade, thus making him ineligible for the team, has at last lost his foothold, and student sympathy for him is failing fast. Five men not long since received notice that for failure to make a grade their services were no longer needed on the 1922 baseball team. The sympathy we used to hear for such men has turned to wrath. We are glad that this is so. It speaks well for Elon.

Now, this paper believes in athletics. No one admires a worthy athlete more than we do, and no one gives the team any more whole-hearted backing than we do. But we most certainly do not believe in the athlete who will lie down on his job and flunk most of his subjects just because he thinks his position on the team is so essential to the welfare of the college that he will be allowed to play anyway. The students back such a man on the athletic field to the limit of their resources, and for him to spit in the face of such support as he does when he has himself kicked from the team is nothing short of treason to his teammates and to his fellow students.

We have not heard a word of sympathy for the lost baseball players, and we hope we shall not hear any. If these fellows have the making of real men in them, they will spruce up and regain their lost place in the respect and affection of Elon students. If they are no good at all, they will quit entirely, and we shall let them go without any regrets.

ELON WINS IN FORENSIC BATTLE WITH GUILFORD

R. S. Helms, speaking first, declared that the Senate has been a burying ground for many good treaties, citing a number of instances where treaties have died in the Senate to the hurt of other nations as well as our own.

S. G. Hodgkin, first speaker for the negative, pictured the advantages of open discussion in the Senate.

H. Lee Scott, continuing Elon's argument, took up the League of Nations treaty and its defeat upon purely party lines, and said that the transferring of the treaty-making power would eliminate politics from international treaties.

J. S. Taylor, Jr., concluding the argument for the negative, contended that the government would become a despotism should this power be granted the Executive Department.

The judges for this occasion, who decided the question affirmatively upon the merits of the argument, were Rev. W. R. Potter, D. D., Burlington, N. C.; Rev. E. N. Caldwell, Graham, N. C., and Hon. D. J. Walker, Burlington, N. C.

Professor Paul S. Kennett, of the faculty here, acted as president for the debate, and W. J. Cotten and William Wolf as time-keepers.

The negative team representing Elon debated at Guilford on the same night that the affirmative team debated at home. This team was composed of R. O. Smith and W. T. Scott. The decision committee rendered a two-to-one decision in favor of Elon. These young men offered strong argument, especially in the rebuttal.

The last number was a humorous reading given by Mrs. Rainey entitled, "What William Henry Did."

Misses Goff, Cardwell, Kirkland and Mrs. Rainey received special mention from the judges.

ERSKINE AND FURMAN GO DOWN BEFORE ELON NINE

By a bunt-and-run offensive the visitors sewed up the game in the eighth frame by tallying for their fourth time.

The wet condition of the ground made the fielding of both teams show up poor, and slowed up the game, though at no period did it lack in interest. The outstanding hurling by Jones, of Lenoir, was the only feature of the game, having 15 strikeouts to his credit.

Erskine
With Perry working on the mound in the game with Erskine College Tuesday afternoon, Elon had little difficulty in taking the big end of a 4 to 1 score. Perry was working in mid-season form, and allowed only five hits for the eight innings he worked, scattering them through four innings. Kennedy doing the twirling for the South Carolinians although allowing the Elonites only five hits, was unable to keep them scattered, and this, coupled with poor support from his teammates at critical moments, caused the Erskine defeat.

Fogleman substituted for Perry in the box for the ninth inning, and though allowing two hits in that inning, air-tight fielding kept the visitors from scoring. Elon's three earned runs came in the seventh when hits by Newman, Clark and Underwood, coming at opportune times, brought in three scores. The other tally in the fourth came by Allston's being hit by a pitched ball, stealing second, and advancing to third and home on a sacrifice by Marlette and error on Reed. Erskine's lone tally in the eighth was of a fluke variety, Kennedy being safe on an error, advancing to third on Young's two-bagger and getting safe in home on an infield sacrifice. Young, of Erskine, was the only outstanding hitter, getting two singles and a double out of four trips to the plate, the only man of either nine to get more than one hit. Clark center fielder for Elon, was back in the game today, and aided materially in the fielding.

Furman
The Elon team opened their batting eyes Wednesday and trounced Furman University to the tune of 6 to 2, securing eleven hits off of Andrews, five of which went for extra bases.

After a bad start in the opening inning Fogleman, pitching his first college game, tightened up and held the visitors at his mercy, allowing only six hits, three of which came in the first inning. Bradley, first up for Furman, singled. Carter followed with a two-bagger, and another hit by Lance gave Furman their two tallies. After that Elon had things their own way. Fogleman struck out 11 of the visitors.

Elon was unable to score until the third, when Smith duplicated Underwood's two-bagger, who had preceded him at bat, sending Underwood around.

Stoner's three-bagger in the sixth started a merry-go-round, and before the side was retired timely hits by Allston and Cheek let in three runners.

Again in the eighth inning things looked bad for the Furman pitcher when Clark lifted one far over centerfield for three sacks, sending in Allston, who had singled ahead of him; Underwood winding up the inning with a single that sent Clark home.

The heavy hitting of the Elon nine and the stellar pitching of Fogleman after the first inning were the features of the game. Both teams played good ball in the field, only three errors being charged up during the game, two of which went to Furman, and all three of which were hard chances.
