

HELMS WINS ORATOR'S MEDAL IN CLIO CONTEST

and worthwhile and represents a sacrifice on the part of those who distinguished it as a symbol of liberty and freedom.

Other speakers in the contest were Messrs. H. E. White, W. C. Elder, H. C. Hainer, and R. S. Rainey. Mr. White spoke on "Fraternity Life." He plead earnestly and forcefully for better social, scholastic, moral and religious life in the college fraternities, and showed wherein real live, true, and honest fraternities are a valuable addition to any college and are entitled to an important place on the college campus. Mr. Elder spoke on "Industrial Unrest." In his speech he cited many of the causes for the conflict between capital and labor which could be eliminated and would make for better understanding between the two classes, and better industrial conditions. Mr. Elder's speech was very good, and many expressed the opinion that he proved himself a close rival to the winning speakers. In speaking on "The Evils of Tobacco," Mr. H. C. Hainer aimed a forceful blow at those who would allow themselves to become victims of the "filthy weed," he contended that for the sake of the race, tobacco must be abolished, not by an amendment to the federal constitution but by the force of public sentiment.

Perhaps the most pleasing feature of the entire program came when Mr. R. S. Rainey delivered his address on "Women." His appearance on the floor was the signal for prolonged applause and much laughter from the audience, and none seemed more pleased than were the subjects of his interesting discourse. He began by giving a brief discussion on the brief subject of women's wearing apparel, commenting on the changes of style in the last fifteen or twenty years and complimenting the women upon emancipating themselves from the torture of long skirts and silly bindings. He then announced that women's clothes would disappear from the rest of his speech and began to discuss women's ways. His entire speech was compounded with compliments, censure, admiration and criticism in just the proper proportions to make it palatable and enjoyable as well as wholesome and instructive. Mr. Rainey, in addition to being a good speaker, is a comedian par excellence, and his speeches are always greeted with enthusiasm by his hearers.

The president of the contest announced that the Clio orator's medal would be awarded to Mr. Helms, the winner of the contest, at the society reunion at Commencement.

sincerity of purpose, and his address is looked forward to with great interest by the people of that section.

R. N. Hauser will preside, as the chairman of the district. Three of the district pastors will be present at the rally: Rev. Mr. Hunter, of the Winston-Salem First M. P. church; Rev. Mr. Hamlin, and Rev. W. D. Reid. The fourth pastor, Rev. E. A. Bingham, will be unable to attend, as he is not yet in his field of labor. Mr. Bingham is a graduate of Elon, and will complete his theological course at the Westminster Theological Seminary this spring. Mr. Bingham is expected to reach his work near the end of May.

The rally will last for the whole of the day and at the evening meeting R. F. Williams and J. Norman Wills will speak in the interest of the M. P. college.

Mr. Hauser will speak on the Sunday school as an educational factor, and is making a careful study of the subject preparatory to the address. His advanced and progressive ideas will insure an able discussion of this most important matter. He will stress the relationship of the Sunday school to higher education, and show how important it may be made as a recruiting agency of the college.

on the subjects designated. They will there contest for two medals; the young ladies for the Moffitt Essayist's medal, and the men for the Stamford Orator's medal.

All the orations delivered by the Seniors manifested considerable preparation and thought, and it is said by some who have listened to orations by the Senior class for a number of years that this year's collection was the best that they had ever heard. There is already much speculation as to the winners of the medals, and much interest will be felt in the final contest at Commencement.
