"A negro hotel proprietor in Fayetteville, N. C., when asked by one of his white friends if any of his guests left without paying their hotel bills, replied, 'No, sir, I makes 'em all pay in advance 'fore day eats or sleeps in dis place. You see some hotels is run on de European plan, some on de American plan, but I runs dis hotel strictly on de African plan.'"

Some Other Good Ones

Pat Maloney was an Irishman afflicted with muscular rheumatism twisted and badly drawn out of shape. On cold winter days he made his loafing quarters in the livery stable office back of the stove in a corner. Mike Olarey being a new man in town and not knowing of Pat's affliction comes down to the livery stable one cold afternoon opens the door of the office and looks in, seeing Pat in the corner all drawn up, blarneys out at him: "Hey there, ye blooming red headed scorpion, ye better hove out of that corner or ye'll warp all to thunder."

Mother: "John, go to the store and get me some cold cream."

After some time John returns, bringing an ice cream cone.

Mother: "I didn't want ice cream, I wanted cold cream."

John: "Well, that's the coldest cream he had."

Two small sons of a Baptist minister, who had heard all their lives their father's doctrines that baptism by immersion is essential to salvation, decided one day that they would baptize their family of cats. A tub of water was prepared and one by one the kittens, without resistance, obediently went under, but when it came to the mother cat, who had watched the ordeal with frightened eyes, she rebelled and scratched and absolutely refused to be put under the water.

After many futile efforts, one of the small boys with the angry cat in his arms exclaimed:

"Sprinkle her then, and let her go to hell."

Porter: "Yo' better keep yo' head out ob dat window."

Bones: "Look here, blacker dan midnight, I don't take orders from nobody."

Porter: "Well, if you damage any ob our railroad bridges you sholy goin' pay for 'em."

An old colored woman lost her husband and was wearing mourning. Her mistress came in one morning to find her making undergarments of black. "Mirandy" she said, "Why are you making all your clothes black?" "Cause, Misses, when I mourns I mourns through and through," said Marindy.

Grace, eighteen-year-old daughter of Mrs. Wooten, invites her sweetheart, a young preacher, to dinner. When all were seated around the table, Grace's little six-year-old brother, Billy, was still talking.

Preacher: Now, Billy, put your head down. I'm going to ask grace.

Billy: Oh! We have been expecting that for a long time.

Bill seemed to be very unfortunate when it came to girls, 'til he bought a Ford Coupe and then he couldn't quite understand, why he could get a girl, "anytime, anyday, anywhere," and asked friend Joe why the chickens flocked around him so.

Joe: "Well, you drive a coop, eh?" (Coupe.)

Dad: (Sternly)—"Where were you last night?"

Son:—"Oh, just riding around with some of the boys."

Dad:—"Well, tell them not to leave their hairpins in the car next time."

Good Bye, Bonnie

My Bonnie leaned over the gas tank, The height of the contents to see; He lighted a match to assist him— Oh, bring back my Bonnie to me! Oh, bring back my Bonnie to me!
