Emory and Henry has beaten Elon once. Shall they do it again?

The team that we meet Saturday will be one of the very few teams we have met this year and had an equal chance to beat.

Some men seem to be successful because they didn't have an equal opportunity to succeed.

LEARN TO LIVE

As we near the end of the first semester this year, it is well that we take inventory of our achievements for the past weeks. Every student here has now been in college long enough to realize that it is not supposed to be a great funnel. We should all be able to see by now that there is no such thing as having knowledge poured into our heads. As far as pure knowledge is concerned we have all discovered that it must be dug out. We must add to our own brain power, it can't be increased from the outside.

So much for the acquiring of pure knowledge. All of us have learned something this year from that standpoint. We will learn a little if only we attend classes. But in looking back over the time we have spent here in college we begin to realize that the ultimate aim of a college course is not mere learning of the content of books. We are now in a position to see that the aim of college, and of all learning is to teach us to live. Though we learned to speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not learned to live with our fellow-man, we have accomplished nothing. After carefully looking the matter over we can easily see that this one thing is the aim of the field of education.

Then if we are to learn to live with our fellow-man, how are we to get this from our college course. First of all we must make ourselves realize that this is the aim of our education. Then we must practice living. Let this statement cover a wide range. Do you create disturbances in the buildings and around the campus because it adds anything to your education, or do you do it because you have never fully realized that you are in college to learn to live with your fellow-man? Do you take the letter of the law as your own, or do you consider that may be a trifling condescension on your part will aid some one else more than it will you? This is what we mean by learning to live. Meet your neighbor on equal terms. Give him his just deserts and expect of him your just part.

You can't take the four years spent in college out of your life. What you are and what you do here will be what you are and what you do after you leave college. Live here as you expect to live after you get out of college. And remember that the yell of the school of experience is "ouch." That school is your alma mater and it will be appropriate for you to learn that yell and know its significance.

Green Onions

Alas! the Crymes and Wicker case grows worse. They go off on the Boosters' Club and while enjoying supper Mr. Wicker happens to think of Henry Crymes' old nickname. It seems as if supper will break up. I will not mention the afore-mentioned nickname for I value my life to be at least worth 2c.

He kissed her on the rosy cheek
It was a pleasing smack;
And quick she turned and frowned on him

With—"Now Sir, take that back."

With our team losing so much, it is time for all good lemons to come to the aid of their team.

Good-lookin' Folks alluz 'spects too much—en gin'allly gits it!!

I kissed her as the lights were out
Ye Gods! I pulled a bone;
For I found when they came on again
I had kissed the chaperone.

Keep smiling 'tis better than looking sore;

The pestilent fretter is always a bore.
He wearies his neighbors with Carrie and Rick

They pause in their labors to hand him a brick.

Keep smiling for knocking won't help you along

And pessimist talking will get you in wrong.

A bushel of curses won't help you come back,

If ills or reverses loom up in your track,
Keep smiling, insisting that things are all right,

And mating and wisting that joy is in sight.

Thus you will be wielding an influence fine;

It's better than yielding to sorrow and brine.

The people admiring your sun-shiny curses,

Will say, "He's inspiring—a crown he deserves!"

Jokes:

LYNCHBURG DOWNS ELON TO TUNE OF TWELVE TO NOTHING IN SLOW GAME

from beginning to end. Lynchburg's forward passing attack troubled the Elon defense during the first half. Outside of this the Lynchburg eleven did not show any powerful offense. On the other hand the Elon backs seemed to have little trouble in getting through the Lynchburg line.

Carpenter and McMains were the outstanding men on the Lynchburg team, while Kirkland, Raub, and Bock showed up well in the Elon backfield. Rountree at center played a very consistent game and was very successful in breaking up the enemy plays before they got started good. Lynchburg gained 311 yards for 11 first downs and Elon gained 78 yards for four first downs.

The line-up:

Lynchburg	Position	Elon
Perry	Left End	Byerly
Givens	Left Tackle	Alexander
Suttenfield (c)	Left Guard	Parkerson
Riley	Center	Rountree
Allen	Right Guard	Jones
West	Right Tackle	Brawley
Grant	Right End	Brown
McMains	Quarterback	Kirkland (c)
Barber	Left Halfback	Coggins
Carpenter	Right Halfback	Raub
Thomas	Fullback	Harrell

Scoring touchdowns—Barber and Carpenter.

Substitutions: For Lynchburg—Shank for Suttenfield, Smith for Barber, Newcomer for Givens, Ross for Smith, Gerald for Ross, Suttenfield for Allen, Ross for Gerald, Rairden for Newcomer, Douglas for Suttenfield, Rairden for Newcomer, Carroll for Ross, Barber for McMains. For Elon—Bock for Coggins, Byart for Brown, McCauley for Parkerson, Kelly for Harrell.

Referee, Sampton, St. Albans; Umpire, Epes, Virginia Tech; Linesman, Wright, Wofford; Time, 15 minute periods.

ELON IS DIVIDED ON THE WORLD COURT QUESTION

their blood in Flanders Fields in a war to end war. Yet today America as a nation has taken no steps to bring the world nearer to permanent peace than it was before America entered the conflict. There are those who would argue for isolation from world affairs. We must realize that our days of isolation are over, and that America must take her rightful place among the civilized nations of the world in working out permanent peace.

Mr. Peel argued that a means for substituting law and reason for war is essential in the world today, that the World Court furnishes a satisfactory medium for this, that it is an impartial tribunal, that it is established upon a sound basis, and that America runs no great risk of becoming entangled in Europe by entering, since it is mainly a question of placing our prestige behind the Court. He expressed the opinion that entering the Court on the Harding-Hughes-Coolidge terms furnished the most satisfactory step at present open to America.

Volunteers were called for. Prof. Barney arose to declare that the negative side of the question had not been fairly represented. "Suppose," he said, "some southern European nation or Japan should bring the question of America's immigration laws before the Court, and that the Court should decide that our immigration laws were unjust, and that immigrants must be allowed to swarm into our country.

With their standards of living they will undermine our institutions. Further, suppose Great Britain should bring the prohibition controversy before the Court. If the Court should decide that British and Canadian liquor must be allowed to come into our country, what are we to do?

"Again, if the Court is not to have compulsory jurisdiction, where are we any better off than we were before? What is the use of having the Court if nations are not to be forced to come before it?"

Mr. Peel rejoined to Prof. Barney's questions. He attacked the two conceptions of the Court as inconsistent. The World Court can not be a spineless ornament with no power, and at the same time have such power as to endanger America. While the Court is not a panacea for world evils, and while it can not have jurisdiction over all international controversies, yet it has proved itself a vital working force for world peace and furnishes a satisfactory basis for promoting international law. The immigration and prohibition questions could never come before the Court. We would not agree to it, and although these questions have international significance, they do not constitute international controversies, which are the only disputes concerning which the Court has jurisdiction.

The debate then turned into a battle between Prof. Barney and Mr. Peel, in which one refuted and the other re-refuted.

It seemed that the Professor's fears of European domination triumphed over Mr. Moore's optimistic idealism and Mr. Peel's legalistic conception of the issues involved. The vote of the audience on the proposals was:

- No. 1—120.
- No. 2— 23.
- No. 3— 4.
- No. 4—138.
