NEW YEAR'S THOUGHTS

"Hats off to the past, coats off to the future."

"I'm always quarrelling with time. It is so short to do anything but so long to do nothing."

"To make new mistakes is human; to repeat old mistakes is stupid."

Men are smoking less and eating more candy, women are smoking more and eating less candy, according to official reports at the Confectioner's Exhibition in Hull, Eng.

ELON OPENS JANUARY THIRD—NO EXAMS

Examinations, the chief stronghold of the professors to smouldering ruins. And to strengthen this contention it is only just to say that the season was "right" for an extremely destructive gas attack.

Victory Ahead!

January 3, 1929, marks a possible turning point in the war, for on that date hostilities were resumed more vigorously. But for a brief while the enemy held its lines stoutly and it was difficult to gain a decided advantage over him. On the afternoon of that date he even started a general advance along the entire front. But then the tide turned.

The League of Nations!

The Commander-in-Chief, directing the enemy's attack, observed that his ammunition was almost exhausted. Speedily inspecting the works of fort Examinations, he found them in a deplorable condition. One-half of the fort had already been utterly destroyed and the remaining half was so exposed to shell-fire and to the gas attacks of the students as to render it useless. Upon seeing this he immediately held a conference with all division commanders and administrators with a view to giving up the worthless fort. A decision was reached: "Further expenditures of time, money, and energy in the struggle for Fort Examinations is unwise; besides it is the enemy's property and we must admit that we are in the wrong about it. The fort must be abandoned!" Immediately following this important decision the students received the surrender of the ruined fort with exceeding great joy and shouts of triumph.

No Conglaration!

The war has had no great effect upon the daily duties of the students. When they went home on their furloughs there were those in authority who firmly believed that many a husky would desert the army or would fail to report for action. But such an idea has been proven to be wholly erroneous. True a few of the veterans did not return but in their place a regiment of fresh troops entered the ranks with the result that the war is now being desperately prosecuted.

Traditional Smashing!

Enthusiasm is great, at the present time, and every one is happy—especially the girls. It is true that during the holidays, when the furloughs were granted, that some of them quarreled and quit, or returned with gas masks (frowns) on. But the vast majority was affected differently—quite differently. For there were those who returned wearing diamonds—and smiles were everywhere. Some said, "Yes" to a certain interrogation while others flatly refused and ejaculated "No!"

Honor to Whom Honor Is Due!

Who did it—who did it? Let us find out for certainly he is worthy of all honor. Millions of toasts have been proposed to the originator of the idea—to him who through his wonderful eloquence and convincing power has "done and eliminated those examinations. Why not have a banquet in his honor and invite all living creatures? Better get the spirit, "gang", for verily I say unto you it will be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the last days than for him who is a victim of those awful exams.

TO THE NEW PEN PUSHERS

Faithful are the wounds of a friend; but the kisses of an enemy are profuse. (Prov. xxii, 6).

A surgeon inflicts wounds that he may restore the health of his patient to its former soundness and integrity. A true friend inflicts wounds that his friend may be free from the blemishes that render character ugly and personality imperfect. He who presumes to be a friend and never cuts into some spot in his friend's life that festers with deadly poison is not a genuine friend, but merely a pretender.

"Faithful are the wounds of a friend." Just as true today is that ancient observation as it was centuries ago. We are first wounded then healed and made whole by the tender, yet firm, knives in the hands of our friends. They excise our haughty pride, empty vanity, ridiculous theories, silly motions, vain conceits, presumptuous cocksureness, beloved egotism, and all of the unlovely traits that blemish our lives and character—if we will humbly submit to their surgical processes.

As true friends to the new fraternity and sorority members we wish to perform our first operation. First, we want to congratulate you upon your scholastic ability and traits of character that made possible your entrance into a social club. We also wish to tell you that you are no better than your neighbor who was not eligible to become a member, or who didn't get a bid; and that you are not entitled to special rights not given to every other student on the campus. People are watching you and you should guard against snobbishness.

Remember that you are no better than other students!

Your fraternity brothers and sorority sisters, if they are your true friends, will inflict on you many wounds, but if you are the genuine ladies and gentlemen that we believe you are, you will submit to your operation without a whimper and will gladly suffer the wounds in order to be made whole.

The Master was a friend, the Supreme friend of man. He inspired the author of the words, "faithful are the wounds of a friend," and hopeless indeed is he who chafes under the keen knife in the hands of friends. We are trusting that your club will give you many successful operations, and that in the end you will be made WHOLE.
