

OKLAHOMA SCHOOLS MAY LOSE TWO YEARS ACADEMIC WORK

Athletic Staffs Already Curtailed; Women Given Equality With Men.

Ie. N. S. Recent dispatches from the Oklahoma Daily and the Daily O'Collegian, student newspapers of Oklahoma University and Oklahoma A. & M. College, respectively, indicate that these two schools, and possibly other state institutions of higher learning, are in danger of losing the first two years of academic work in several different departments.

Having just escaped a bill for the taxation of fraternity property, the two larger state schools are now faced with the problem of retaining their athletic staffs as well as retaining the Freshman and Sophomore work in many departments.

Oklahoma A. & M. College had its athletic staff reduced to six members in the appropriation recently passed by the State Legislature. If the complete staff is retained, the salaries must be raised by extraneous means. The stipulation was given in the appropriation as three men and three women, which would tend to place women's intramural activities on a par with the men's. Oklahoma University suffered a similar shearing of its athletic staff, and the combined move is probably the most drastic step taken in the middlewestern colleges towards soft pedaling athletics.

Governor W. H. (Alfalfa Bill) Murray is said to be in favor of the elimination of the first two years of college work. It is understood that Governor Murray believes the high school junior college system, which has advanced rapidly of late, can take care of the first two years, along with other secondary and preparatory schools. The move is taken as the first step toward a consolidation and elimination of duplication in effort of the two schools. Governor Murray was unable to be reached for a statement, being in Illinois.

ARE YOU WELL DRESSED?

Black Hat Instead of Derby

Practically every college man will receive with pleasure the decree of better dressed men that the dinner coat—or Tuexdo—must be accompanied by a black felt hat, either a Homburg or snap brim. The derby is passe.

The dinner coat should follow broad shouldered, subdued waist lines, instead of hugging the figure. The lapels are wider and more pointed, and are faced in satin or a dull fabric.

After several years of discussion, the type of shirt that opens in the back seems to have won preference, because it has only two studs showing, and also saves wear and tear on the fingernails. The short, narrow-bosomed shirt of white birdseye pique is the niftiest type. The stiff shirt is to be preferred by all means to the soft-bosomed one.

The wing collar has bolder wings and is a little higher than in the past. The bow tie should be of black satin, with pointed butterfly ends.

Other accessories should include a muffler of all white crepe or white with a white and black fringe. Tied in the Ascot manner, with one end looped through the other high up on the neck, the appearance is smarter. Then the old standby braces (or suspenders) are preferred to a belt.

The studs at this time are smartest if they are hexagon shaped jado affairs with tiny pearl centers. The handkerchief should be of fine linen, either all white, or white with a black monogram. Black silk hose, with or without white clocks, are the thing. Patent leather pumps are still very much in style, although black calf or patent oxford may be worn instead.

EDUCATION GOES MODERN

How President Robert Maynard Hutchins has modernized education by his latest innovation at the University of Chicago is the subject of the editorial by Patricia Reilly Foster in the March issue of College Humor. Mrs. Foster calls attention to the fact that:

"The playgrounds of America—the colleges and universities reserved for the pleasures of youth in this country, wherein they may dwell in luxury for four years, become expert drinkers and dancers and dilettantes in the grand manner—these country clubs of the educational world are about to be done over so that any fellow with the strange hallucination that he would like to go to school to learn something may now be permitted to do so.

"One of the most forward steps in education in this country has just been taken. . . the studious person who wishes to apply himself to research or a perusal of the arts will now be permitted to go ahead as fast as possible and even be given a degree at the end of a year if he can do the four year's work in that time.

"President Hutchins has brought freedom to education and if your little loafing game has been spoiled you can blame him."

That's Different—

Mistress: "I am sorry you are leaving us, Anna; but of course if you are going to better yourself—"

Maid: "O, no, madam; I am going to be married."

TRUSTEE LUNCHEON

Domestic Science Dept. Hostess

The Domestic Science department and its very efficient head, is to be highly commended for the luncheon given by them to trustees on the 24 of last month. The sewing room was converted into a large dining room. Tables were arranged together and no detail of decoration was overlooked.

A Washington's birthday scheme was very effectively carried out. A cherry tree in full bloom, stood in one corner, flags were used in various places, and place cards, with patriotic decorations were used. All of these were made by the department. Then the very delicious luncheon was served in a pleasing manner by the members of Miss Payne's class.

Present, were the trustees, many of the faculty and their wives, all of whom expressed their highest compliments to the department for the excellent service. This showed what the department of home economics is really accomplishing.

of the ungodly, which was followed by Lot's wife, who turned back. There was also the rich young ruler, who was told how he might get on the right road but hesitated. The second road, is the Godly road. Job followed this road; Simon Peter gave up all and went the right road. Others have done it. Many are going that Godly road now, but what of the others?"

Elon will not prosper by these unmarked things, but in hearts and lives of men and women. When you walk in the right way others will follow. The greatest marker is the human heart."

Which is larger—the white ball or the black? Don't answer too quickly.
