

four cars answered the call and offered their blood. Of these several, including Scott Boyd, senior; Charles Evans sophomore, and Luke Query sophomore gave their blood but by Sunday morning his condition was so critical that little hope was held for his recovery. At 12:30 he quietly passed away.

His father, Rev. M. H. Horton, who had been at his son's bedside since Friday, was with Bill at death. Word reached the campus

"bull" sessions in smoke-filled dormitory rooms. Inspiring stories of his life—of how, the morning before his accident, he had worked through the night until 5 o'clock preparing a term paper; of his genius in concocting chemical preparations for the cure of mild ailments; of his perfect scholastic record, and his princely conduct. His classmates talked of his manliness; of how he followed the sports—intelligently and sincerely. During home baseball games do is let the Alumni take over the fourth issue of the Maroon and Gold. With proper effort this could be financed without working a hardship on any one. Four issues have been sent out this spring without cost to the alumni.

Local units should be recognized wherever as many as ten alumni happen to be located.

The Alumni directory should be gotten out next year. It was started as a five year bulletin.

Perhaps the best remedy right now would be to pay the Secretary a salary (whatever we could) and require of this secretary a certain amount of time or certain task we may define in the general meeting. We might start this with the idea of putting on a full time secretary at a later date.
—GEO. D. COLCOUGH.

this spring Bill refused to enjoy the contests as an ordinary fan. He wanted to see the game as a scorekeeper so he'd make score sheets and keep the record of each man's work. He knew sports and followed Elon athletic activities as close as the participants themselves.

He was a rare type of "good" student. He worked hard at his books, but still managed to keep well-read on practically all subjects.

On Wednesday, May 8, at Ellington, funeral services for Bill were conducted. At Elon students held a brief service as a tribute to their leader's memory. Burial was made at Otto, N. Y. Other memorial services will be held during commencement.

He is survived by his parents, two older brothers and an older sister.
