DAY STUDENT DOODLINGS

BY MAX STOREY

Ed. note: While your Day Student Doodler is convalescing from a rather sudden operation he has given over this column to Ed Moss. That operation must have been more serious than we thought. The poor boy is out of his mind.

By ED MOSS

With the fanatical zeal of Archie, the educated cockroach, we plunge into the doings of the day students during the past week and come up with a couple of items. Mlle. Tickle, of Burlington and M. Stanley, of Greensboro, have their own Monday morning quarterback session before the 8 o'clock French class. The gauze they discussed last week was the Burlington - Greensboro clash here at Elon. Mlle. Tickle came in beaming with delight over the victory of her team while M. Stanley admitted that his team was beaten in a manner which was no discredit to the Greensboro team.

M. G. Burke, one of the day student reporters, writes in to offer his congratulations to Editor John Waisson for his timely editorial in the last issue of the Maroon and Gold. "More power to you, John," says M. G. "Give us more like that."

The day students are proud to claim as members of their organization Ed Nash and Henry Richards, who gave such fine performances as David and Fritz in the Elon Players' production of "Claudia". We would like to see all the day students take a more active part in the activities here at school.

Bob Neese relates that times were so hard in Washington last Summer he overheard one gold digger complain that, "It's a long time between minks." A bubble gum manufacturer has announced that his product can now be obtained in six delightful colors. By combining two pieces of different colors one can obtain most any shade one desires. Science is truly wonderful.

An article which appeared in local papers this week stated that the United States would be comprised of a race of morons by the year 2000 A. D. Only a few intellectuals will be left to rule the masses, according to the new story. Some of the professors at Elon will probably agree with the writer of the article when they finish grading examination papers. Only they will probably set the date up a few years.

A query from Ladies Hall as to the whereabouts of Joe Westmoreland during the past few weeks has just come in by carrier pigeon.

Max should be back by the time the Maroon and Gold goes to press again. If he has nothing else to write about he can tell about his operation.

Several Speakers Address The I.R.C.

Miss Mary Walker, head of religious education at Elon College, spoke before IRC members and faculty on Monday night, October 10th, in Society Hall. Miss Walker delighted her listeners with an account of Alaska, from which she has returned after two years teaching and traveling.

In describing the territory and its people, Miss Walker observed that nowhere had she seen a land more characteristic of independence, personified in the immortal poem, "The Cremation of Sam McGee," by Robert W. Service. Refuting the "land of the Eskimo" idea, she pointed out that the white population is in preponderance, and that Indians, Eskimos, Chinese, and Japanese together do not exceed the white people. There are towns, schools, and running water in the homes for those who have fears of the wild north. However, this does not mean that the country is not rugged, evident by the type work performed by the majority of people. Fishing, not gold, is the chief industry, and the product of the fisheries is about equal to the sum-total of all other Alaskan products. Next in economic importance is forestry, then gold, and lastly furs. Since only one railway exists, transportation is carried out mostly by plane.

In answering questions from the floor, Miss Walker let it be known that Alaskans are much more perturbed over the Russian situation than most of their fellow Americans.

Miss Walker finished her program by projecting her own color slides of Alaskan topography, explaining each picture and telling of her experiences in that particular locality.

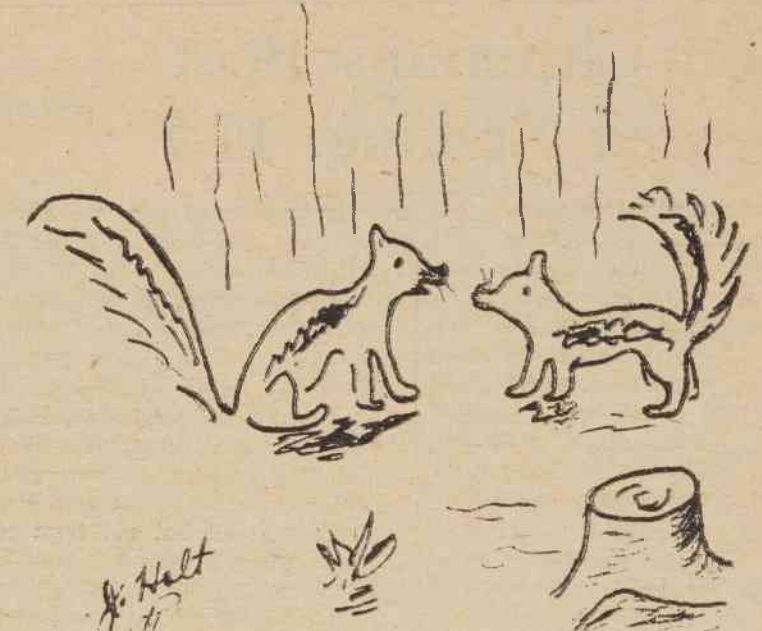

"Who are the enemies of democracy?" This was the question posed by Professor C. W. Paskins, associate professor of History and Sociology at Elon, to International Relations Club members last Monday night. Many of these enemies, elaborated Professor Paskins, might be classified under four groups. They are: the Communists and fellow travelers, the hysterical anti-Communists, the Fascists and fellow traveler and the apathetic.

Domestically, the Communists cannot be done away with because of our own constitution. If the communists are a professed political group expressing political and economic views, by law it is their right to remain. If a religious group, again they are protected by law. However if proven a tool of a foreign country whose aim is to overthrow the government, then they might be expelled for treason, depending upon new interpretations of treason. Efforts to establish these facts have resulted in many investigations and anti-communists sentiments. If expellation is possible, only legal means should be employed in effecting such an end.

Internationally, the effects of Communism are evident in a stiffened U. S. foreign policy, spies are preponderant and misunderstanding widespread.

Hysterical anti-Communists are especially dangerous, said Professor Paskins, as theirs is the prosecution of nearly all liberal groups whose ideals may be anything but Communist. This hysteria has the undesired effect of driving questionable parties undercover, where their activities cannot be observed.

Fascists and their fellow-travelers may be identified generally as those who champion ruthless strong-arm methods to force their particular brand of ideas and attitudes on others. Then there are those unconscious fellow travelers — anti-racists and anti-laborites and those reactionary foes of all liberalism and pro-

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

The Ministerial Association, as you know, is composed of students who are studying for the ministry, religious education, mission field, Bible teaching and other fields of religious service. This year there are 35 members of this organization.

Activities of the Ministerial Association consist of the regular Monday night meetings, the monthly social and the yearly banquet. Plans are underway for the annual event.

An effort is being made to give each person some training in the Monday evening meetings by introducing phases of interest and work with which the individual will deal when he goes into his field. Programs, thus far, have been on "Worship in the Church," Topics under this were "Symbols in Worship," "Music in Worship," and "Prayer in Worship."

An original play written by Dr. Ferris Reynolds was presented which illustrated how symbols are used as a part of our worship. Mr. Fletcher Moore, of the Music Department, gave the group valuable information on the type of music that should be used in the service of worship, and Dr. Dollar spoke on how prayer and meditation are also vitally important.

Two meetings were under the direction of members of the group. Bland Leebrick and Donald Brown led in a program illustrating music in worship. The last meeting in this series was a candlelight service prepared and presented by Bill Scott.
