ed by a Mr. Brown who lived near the campus. It had no seats, springs, shock absorbers or rubber tires—just a plain, old-fashioned farm wagon...

There were some people who never failed to show up when they heard the drummer start. Among them were Lynn Johnson and "Uncle" Pink Comer...

Campbell had every right to be proud of his band groups, and he was especially boastful of that first unusual group of men in that 1907 band...

"If music happened to blow away when playing outdoor concerts," Campbell stated, "they kept right on playing just the same. They could start anywhere in a number and quit at the twist of a finger..."

Concerts were numerous during those early years of the band. On certain evenings the band met at the band stand, which was located on the campus between the Religious Education building and Possum Avenue...

Evidently the musicians were a bit slow gathering at times, so Campbell announced that the next concert would start on time even if there were no other members there but the bass drummer and himself...

The Great Burlington Fair (in the present location of Calvary Baptist Church and Forest Hill Elementary School) was another source of income for early bands...

Among the members of that day were P. E. Lindley, president; J.

Biggerstaff Is Speaker For Sorority

The Beta Chi Epsilon, the sorority composed entirely of girls who are students in the commercial classes, had Frank M. Biggerstaff, of Burlington, as a guest speaker...

Mr. Biggerstaff chose "Phases of the Business World" as his topic for discussion before the girls, and he pointed out for the sorority members many features that a modern business man looks for and expects in a good secretary...
