Elon Defeats Apps In Conference Tilt

GEE:SAIDRAOO! As a child, Sandra Dofflemyer rebelled against her mother's insisting that she take majorette instruction.
Because she was six years old, most the decisions around Sandra's home in Elkton, Va., still came from her parents, so the flaxen-haired cutie reluctantly gave baton lessons a whirl.
By the time Sandra reached high school, she'd collected by her twirling umpry-ump batoneering always are, had been right all along.

When it came to considering college, Sandra gave a look at a girl's school nearly within parade distance of her Shenandoah Valley town.

"But, you know," Sandra said, "the demand for twirlers at a school such as that is zero.
To be sure, the disraff college sponsors a concert band, but it lacks a football team, although a couple of seasons ago the gals there were think ing of taking on the Elon varsity with victory in mind.
Sondra proferred Dear Old Mother with a decision, being of age for such: "I'm going to Elon.'

Why Elon?
"Well," explained SanJra, "we Dofflemyers, like birds, fly south in winter.
This is a circumstance, doubtless, that brings joy to Maestro Jack 0. White's head, for Sandra hardly detracts from the Mighty Fighting Christians Marching Musical Magnifico.
andra thinks up her own routines. Jack O., in his band parlance, terms such "head arrangements," or straight from the cranium and no writ ten stuff. I he band plays, and Sandra in fctching, albcit wondrously abbreviated uniform, warms up the show from there cold days.
What happens then freczec," Sandra

The Fighting Christian basketeers finally moved into the eighth spot in the Carolinas Conference standings when they rallied in the second half to defeat the Appalachian Mountaineers 81 to 75 in a Conference cage battle in Elon's Alumni Memorial Gymnasium on Wednesday night, February

After getting away to a disastrous start and dropping seven straight Conference tilts in early season, the Christians had been fighting to move into the top eight teams all year, and they finally gained that ranking with the App win on the same night when Catawba was defeating Newberry. The question then loomed for the Christians of holding eighth place or better to assure a spot in the conference tournament season's end.
The Christians and Apps seesawed back and forth through the early part of the game, but the Apps hit a hot streak to gain a $48-42$ margin at the halftime break. At that moment the prospects for Elon appeared dark indeed.
Then, as the second half began, the Elon cagers found their shooting eyes a bit sharper and tied the score at 51-all.Richard McGeorge got the tying basket, and Henry Coedeck put Elon in front at 63-62 for keeps. Elon widened the margin in the closing moments of the closing batrle.
Goedeck led the Elon attack with 24 points, while Tommy Davis an Tom McGee each added 16 and Bobby Atkins racked 13 counters in the Elon offensive. Top scorers for Appalachian were Allen Price and Preston Williams with 20 points. THE SUMMARY. Pos. Elon (81) Appa. (75) F.McGeorge (8) Beau (11) F. Davis (15) Chev.(14) C. Goedeck (24) Price(20) G.
