

Editorial Of Silent Majorities

Many times the word "apathetic" has been used to label the average Elon student. The label fits but "lack of spirit" is perhaps a better term.

Elon has a lack of spirit. Granted the spirit showing at a basketball game usually a liquid spirit could disprove this proposition, but basketball games do not create the spirit of the school entirely.

Spirit involves pride academically as well as athletically in a college and when there are students wanting to transfer or complaining because they can't afford to, there is something wrong.

Of course, facts and statistics could prove how many students remain or transfer here as opposed to those who transfer out but there still is an underlying disillusionment among many students.

Today it is in vogue to speak out in support of the "silent majority" and state that everyone is satisfied with the way things are and if you're not, why not leave? Sometimes "silent majorities" may not say much, but that does not entirely mean that they are satisfied with everything either.

A Review Standing Ovation for Emanons

By LARRY SAGE
Jack O. White's Emanon's performed one of the most interesting and popular concerts this year - February 24.

Whitley Auditorium, filled to near capacity Monday night, enjoyed the various offerings by the jazz group, which ranged from Woody Herman pieces to the Beatles.

The group's tonation sounded perfect throughout the program with many fine solos not excluding Jack O. White himself on the trumpet; not forgetting to mention the great vocal contribution of Clinton Horton, which added much to the group's performance. One of the most interesting pieces was a contemporary jazz piece "Variations". The harmony and force of the group revealed its quality of sound, which clearly showed their fine talent.

The most popular perhaps of the evening's performance was the Emanon's arrangement of the Beatles's "Hey Jude", which was requested as an encore after the group received a standing ovation at the end of the concert.

Witnessing the group's performance as well as the audience's response, the Emanons must have had a highly successful tour.

Food Survey

On Tuesday afternoon, March 10, we plan to conduct a Food Preference Survey at the dining halls in order to determine your food likes and dislikes. We want to include the foods you like best in the menus we plan for you. This is one way for you to tell us what those foods are.

We also want to provide you with the finest in food service. The answers you offer on the questionnaire at the time of the survey will help us do this for you.

Thank you for the time and thought we are sure you will give this survey. Results of the survey will be published as soon as they are available.

Dave: If it wasn't for mirrors I wouldn't know what to do with my spare time.

Billy: What I wonder is what people at Elon who are down on us now will say about us in five years if we make it. If their opinion changes, it'll be an hypocrisy.

Bod: Out of thousands of years there have been approximately sixty in which men wore their hair short -- and yet they're down on long hair. It's ironic that careers. Continuing education is encouraged and agencies may pay tuition and other fees for courses in job - related areas. Agencies also conduct their own employee training programs.

While the Federal Government provides the kind of career security which every employee would like to have, this is not the major point being emphasized by the combined agency, recruiters coming on campus. They're stressing the "action line," calling attention to the fact that virtually every significant effort now being made to correct the social ills of our Nation and advance our store of scientific knowledge is either represented by or is the result of a U.S. Government program.

Students or recent graduates interested in obtaining more detailed information on opportunities for Federal careers, taking the Federal Service Entrance Examination, or Government careers in general, should contact the Placement Office or visit the information tables which will be set up prior to the start of the interviews. This is a chance to get the "FACTS" at the Federal Agencies Combined Talent Search.

Check Cashing

The Campus Shop requests that students patronize the new bank in Elon College which has offered to honor checks from Elon students regardless of whether they have opened an account. C. C. (Buck) Bayliff, manager of The Campus Shop, said that the bookstore would still be happy to cash checks for a small amount for students.

Greeks Form Committee to Set Up IGC

By ROGER OLIVER

Interested Greeks here at Elon have banned together in a self-formed committee for the purpose of establishing an Inter - Greek Council (I.G.C.), which will represent all fraternities and sororities on campus. Work began late in the fall semester with correspondence and visits with Greek organizations at other colleges.

During the winter term, the committee drew up a constitution and by-laws, which provide for the control of the various Greeks to be placed in the hands of a consolidated Greek organization -- the Inter-Greek Council.

At present, control of the fraternities and sororities is under a faculty committee temporarily established in 1962 to "give the Pan-Hellenic Council time in which to propose a constitution for the approval of the Board of Trustees." (1970 Elon College Handbook, p. 56).

The I. G. C.'s Constitution, which was modeled after Duke's, provides for two branches: the executive, made up of two representatives from each fraternity and sorority and headed by officers elected from that body; and the judicial, composed of the fraternity and sorority presidents. It will try offenses according to a Penal Code now being drawn up.

As soon as all is complete, the Constitution, By-Laws, and the Penal Code will be submitted to the faculty for approval. Myra Rothwell (Tri-Sig), who was highly instrumental in writing the Constitution, stated that "the establishing of a self-governing organization of Greeks, will promote maturity, responsibility, and cooperation among Elon Fraternities and Sororities."

At present, the various fraternities and sororities on campus are meeting unofficially under the new I. G. C. Constitution, but with administrative approval. New officers are: Bill Bond (ITK), president; Bob Berman (KPN), vice-president; and Susan Pell (BOB), secretary - treasurer.
