Landmark has no more use

by Robin Adams

The water tower in front of Carlton is scheduled to be removed in the near future. "The tower is causing a hazard and must be removed," said Mr. McCauley, director of physical plant.

Several years ago, the state health department said a commercial well should be 100 feet from any building, and only one of the college's four wells meets that requirement.

As of May 1, the college has been on the town's water supply. The delay has been long because several years ago the town couldn't supply the school enough water nor was there enough water pressure, Mr. McCauley said. During the early part of the year the town completed a 200,000-gallon water tank that would serve both school and community.

Mr. McCauley said lately the water supply from the town is a little low because of a leak in the line. Recently, the town has been using water from a hook-up in Burlington. The Burlington supply was only to be used for fire protection.

Mr. McCauley said that many people would hate to see the tower go because they thought of it as a landmark.

However, it's a dangerous landmark and must be removed before any damage is done. The danger occurs because the tower is empty and it's becoming more of a problem to find people to paint and repair it.

Magazine to sponsor contest

edited by Debbie Bennett

Colonnades, the literary magazine of Elon College, announces its first annual literary contest. The contest offers $40 for first prize and $10 for second prize in areas of poetry, prose, and graphics photography.

There is a 5,000-word maximum for prose and a 100-line maximum in poetry. This contest is open to Elon College students, its faculty, alumni, and any other North Carolina writers.

One stipulation Colonnades makes is that "entrants must not have published a book length manuscript in the field of the entry."

All entries except graphics/photography become the property of Colonnades. In order to have graphics/photography returned, there must be a self-addressed envelope enclosed. Duplicates are requested, if possible. The deadline for all of the entries is Dec. 8, 1978.

Judges will be selected by the editors of Colonnades and the decision will be made in early January, 1979. Winners will be advised by mail and their entries will be published in the 1979 issue of Colonnades.

Please send entries to: Colonnades, Box 3609, Elon College, Elon, College, N.C. 27244.

Elon's historical landmark tower, now empty, has been termed dangerous and is to come down soon.

England study-tour set

by Mary E. Priestley

A tentative calendar of activities for participants in the British Studies program in England during January has been worked out by Dr. David Crowe, director, and members of the study-tour faculty.

The group will leave Dulles Airport, Washington, at 8:30 p.m. Jan. 3, arriving at Heathrow about 8:30 a.m. London time, Jan. 4. (England is five hours ahead of Elon College.) A bus will take the group with their baggage along an historic route to the Kennedy Hotel near Euston Station (railway and underground) where they will check in and have time for some sleep before setting out to see their surroundings.

One of the first learning sessions, after trading some U.S. dollars for English pounds, will be to try the underground (subway) trains and to learn to get about the West End of London.

On Jan. 5 the group will go by coach to the ancient city of Winchester, to Salisbury with its cathedral, and to Stonehenge, the prehistoric circles of giant stones on Salisbury Plain. On Saturday, a visit to the Houses of Parliament and the hammer-beamed Hall of Westminster will also allow a glimpse of Canterbury Cathedral, built on the spot where St. Augustine reintroduced Christianity in 597 A.D., will be visited by students on tour from London.
