Bike-a-thon to aid children

Dr. and Mrs. Robert Blake have been appointed chairpersons for Elon's "Wheels for Life" bike-a-thon to raise money for St. Jude's Children's Research Hospital in Memphis. This event will be held Saturday, Sept. 29, at the Elon College track from 8 a.m. until dark. Entry forms are available from either Dean Chris White or Dr. Blake, in 213 Carlton. All persons are eligible, and free refreshments will be available.

Founded 17 years ago by Danny Thomas, St. Jude's is devoted to painstaking medical research and treatment of children stricken with catastrophic diseases, including leukemia, Hodgkins disease and other forms of cancer.

The hospital receives assistance from federal grants and is supported by voluntary contributions raised through such events as the "Wheels for Life" bike-a-thon. This year, healthy children participating in the event will wear a hospital identification bracelet bearing the name of a patient at St. Jude's. Thus, they will be tangibly riding for another child. They will also be helping children across the country and throughout the world since the money raised will benefit research that will ultimately result in knowledge about catastrophic diseases.

English 271-B extended

Novelist teaches here

A visiting writer-in-residence for this semester, Christopher Brookhouse, will teach a two-hour creative writing course on Tuesday afternoons sponsored by the Department of English.

Any Elon College student, regardless of major, is eligible to register for this course. To give students interested in this course an opportunity to take it, registration for English 271-B will be extended beyond the regular registration period. Dr. Brookhouse will be available in the gymnasium on the morning of registration day to talk with prospective students.

Dr. Brookhouse is on a Pogue leave this semester from his professorship at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. He has taught creative writing, contemporary literature, film criticism and other courses there since 1966, when he moved to UNC-CH from teaching at Harvard. His M.A. and Ph.D. are from Harvard University; his A.B. was earned at Stanford University.

Author of novels, poetry and short stories, Brookhouse is best known for his novel, "Running Out," which won the Rosenthal Award from the National Institute of Arts and Letters. This award is given to the best novel of the year which is not necessarily a commercial success. Winners include John Updike. Brookhouse's other honors and awards include: Phi Beta Kappa, Woodrow Wilson Fellowship, Dexter Fellowship (England), John Atherton Fellowship in Prose (Bread Loaf), and "Who's Who in the World."

Though Dr. Brookhouse thinks of himself as a novelist, some of his books include poetry and short stories. His short stories have been collected in Martha Foley's "Best American Short Stories," 1970 and 1973. "Scattered Light" is a collection of poetry and "If Lost, Return" is a collection of short stories and verse. "Running Out" and "Wintermute" are his award winning novels.

Brookhouse's work also includes book-length academic publications, such as "Sir Amadace and the Avowing of Arthur, Two Romances from the Ireland MS, Aglistica XV," and articles on topics as varied as Chaucer, Edwin Arlington Robinson and film.

In addition to offering creative writing, Dr. Brookhouse will present a public reading during the semester at which he will read a part of his latest novel.
