Colson names justice, SGA offices filled

by Keith Nelson

The first appointments to be made by SGA President Bryant Colson for the 1979-80 year are Tory Everett as chief justice and Frank Neely as defense attorney.

Positions of attorney general and the three associate justices with three alternates are yet to be filled. Recommendations of last year's chief justice, Jan Nelson, will be used in filling these positions. Student appointments to the religious life committee are Nan Pearson, senior; Mike Robinson, senior; Pat Branch and Tami Williams, freshmen.

Colson said that the other positions were to be filled later this week. There were several people being considered for committees and judicial seats.

Appointments to homecoming, student life, teacher education, athletic, Communication Media Board, and the Liberal Arts Forum committees have not been made. Colson says, "Any student interested in a position on these committees should come by the SGA office before the first Senate meeting." The office is in Long Student Center, Room 209.

"The SGA is optimistic about the choices, and we are hoping for more applications by students," Colson said. The first meeting of the Senate is Thursday, Sept. 20.

The North Carolina Symphony Orchestra will play a Pops concert at Cummings High School Auditorium at 8 p.m. on Monday evening, Sept. 17.

HOLDERS OF season tickets are reminded that they should have their tickets for two Burlington concerts, including the Sept. 17 program. Tickets may also be purchased at the door, but they should be bought as early as possible because of an expected sell-out.

The recent renovation in front of Long Student Center was initiated by the Class of '54. This gift to the college included benches, trees and the bricks for the sidewalk. Photo by Bill Murphy.

I.F.C. asks for time to adjust

by Jeff Batts

"We have quite a job ahead of us in keeping our fraternity system alive here at Elon," says Larry Sondhaus, president of the Interfraternity Council.

Sondhaus, of Kappa Epsilon, was referring to last year's crackdown by the administration. The crackdown resulted in the loss of housing privileges by two fraternities, probation for another, and a list of new regulations for each fraternity to abide by. The fraternities also were required to go through a charter review which examined the rituals, community projects, grade point averages, and overall standings in the eyes of the campus as well as the town.

Helping Sondhaus this year in the I.F.C. on this and other fraternity business is Dr. David Crowe, assistant professor of history, who is serving as advisor to the I.F.C.

Other officers are Tommy Moore, vice president, Sigma Phi Epsilon; Peter Roughton, vice president, Kappa Sigma; Scott Matthews, secretary, Tau Kappa Epsilon; Barry Ratliff, treasurer, Kappa Psi Nu; and Jeff Batts, reporter, Sigma Pi.

Sondhaus advises the fraternities to cooperate with the college administration and faculty as much as possible.

"Each frat must obey the rules as closely as they can," he says. "However, we ask in return that the administration be patient with our mistakes because we are in a different situation, and need time to adjust."

'Prepare to be stopped for check'

by Robin Adams

The library of Elon College has started a book check system at the main exit doors. The book check means that students, faculty, staff, and other library users will be stopped when leaving the library to have briefcases, books, and handbags opened for inspection. The object is to see that any library books leaving the library have been properly checked out.

The new check was initiated in late August by the library committee because of a loss of 500 volumes a year for the last 10 years, or $7,500 annually in a budget of less than $35,000 for books. The lost or stolen books are high circulation items, which means that the reader may not find the books or materials when he looks for them.

The library committee and the staff realize that a book check system is a serious step to take. They are aware that misunderstandings may arise, Charles Lowry, head librarian, says "For this reason, everyone is being checked. Mr. Lowry asks "everyone to be prepared to stop for the check and to remember that the check is for the preservation of our collection."

I.D. admits to free concert

Through the college institutional membership in the Alamance Community Concert Association, all students, faculty and staff may attend the four 1979-80 programs free of charge. Presentation of I.D. cards at the door of Walter Williams Auditorium in Burlington is all that is required this year.

Dr. Walter Westafer, chairman of the Fine Arts Department and president of the Community Concert Association, announced the arrangement which should entice many from the Elon campus.

First of the series of concerts will be the Rum-

Students are asked to remember that there is a book drop in the Alamance Building rotunda. However, reserved books should not be returned in the rotunda because they may be overdue before the books are picked up every day.

anian Folk Ballet on Oct. 2. This Bucharest group of 45 artists, founded in 1963, and has performed in all parts of the world, most recently in Queen Elizabeth Hall, London. Wearing native costumes, the dancers have been acclaimed the best in Rumania, noted for its folk dancing.

Other programs in the series are the New York Brass Quintet in November. Woody Herman will come to Burlington for the March Concert, and a Festival of Song will be featured in May.

Further information will be published in the Pendulum prior to each of the concerts.

Candidates file by Sept. 21

With the beginning of the 1979-80 year the campaigning of SGA senators and freshman officers begins. Each of the three precincts will elect one upperclassman and one freshman as their respective senators. Freshman will elect class president, vice president, and secretary-treasurer.

In the first precinct are Smith, Carolina, Phi Mu, Tau Kappa Epsilon, Sigma Pi, and Sigma Phi Epsilon houses and dorms. The second precinct consists of the dorms and houses of Hook-Brannock-Barney, Virginia, Sloan, Sigma Sigma Sigma, and Kappa Sigma. Zeta Tau Alpha, Staley, Moffit, North and West dorms and houses make up the third precinct.

Students interested in running for one of these offices should go by the SGA office to pick up registration forms. To qualify, would-be candidates must obtain 75 signatures from the respective precinct and turn them in to the SGA office, Room 209, Long Student Center by Friday, Sept. 21.

Elections will take place on Wednesday and Thursday, Sept. 26 and 27.
