

She's 'first lady of rock'

by Becky Kimbrell

Whether or not she was politicking for Jerry Brown, Linda Ronstadt proved she is still the "first lady of rock" in her recent concert appearance at Reynolds Coliseum in Raleigh. Viewed as a sex symbol, a singer of romantic heart-break tunes, and rock oldies, Ronstadt sings with more freedom and she has fun doing it. Rarely does she write songs herself; she is mainly interested in providing strong lyrics and her concert was just that.

With tight black pants that blended with the red stage, and her new short haircut, Ronstadt opened her concert with "Cost of Love," a song from her latest album, "Mad Love." A slow song followed and the crowd went into a frenzy when she belted out

"It's So Easy." "I Can't Help Myself if I'm Still in Love With You," a country hit from her new album, provided a nice break from the fast pace. "Just One Look" was one of the favorites of the fans. Neil Young's "Look Out For My Love," another new hit was followed by the soft song, "Blue Bayou." "Justine" and "Rise" were also performed.

According to Ronstadt, the best part of the performance was when she sang "Hateless Love." It is her favorite. "I Can't Let Go" and "Hurt So Bad" are two songs of romantic desperation of the 60's from "Mad Love." During "Hurt So Bad," Danny Kortchmar guitar player, excited the crowd with his siren-like guitar solo. "Silver Threads and Golden Needles" followed.

Toward the end of the two hours Ronstadt performed, the 13,000 fans went crazy when she poured out "Poor, Poor Pitiful Me" and "You're No Good." "How Do I Make You," a smash hit, was sung next. "Living in the USA" ended the concert before her two encores. "Heatwave" was the first and she said goodbye to a rare performance with her version of the dramatic "Desperado."

Linda Ronstadt's various types of music—pop, country, rock, folk, rhythm and blues—are different things to different people. She interprets songs in ways that fit her style. Her concert sounded great, her songs were fun, and her recordings attract an audience of all ages.

Wordsworth

'I will play the lion'

Richard Wordsworth, visiting lecturer and acclaimed actor here at Elon, will perform on Shakespeare's birthday, "I will play the lion." His one-man production will be a comparison of ways in which actors look at Shakespeare.

Mr. Wordsworth will act out characters from Shakespeare's works such as Shylock in The Merchant of Venice, Cassius in Julius Caesar, the chorus in Henry V, and Claudius in Hamlet among others.

The productions is focused on the different approaches that actors have to Shakespeare.

The title, "I will play the lion," comes from Shakespeare's play, "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Nick Bottom, a character in the play, wants to play all the parts. He even says, "I will play the lion." All actors want to play the main parts in Shakespeare's plays, and this production discusses the actors' points of view.

The performance will be presented on Wednesday, April 23, in Mooney Theater at 8 p.m.

In addition to "I will play the lion," Mr. Wordsworth is producing "Antigone," an adaptation of the Greek tragedy. This play will be presented on April 29 and 30 in Mooney Theater at 8 p.m.

Sanders co-authors accounting text

Dr. Allen B. Sanders, professor of business administration, has co-authored a book, Financial Accounting — A Basic Approach.

The text is designed for a one-term course in accounting and offers a comprehensive introduction to the basic principles and practices of financial accounting. It is flexible enough to be used in both business and non-business programs at the undergraduate or the MBA level.

Dr. Sanders has written three other books. His Elementary Accounting book is used in the accounting department at Elon. He has also written an American and Canadian edition of his second book, Basic Accounting.

Dr. Sanders came to Elon in 1965 after retiring from the U.S. Navy. He received his B.S. degree from West Virginia University and his MBA from George Washington University. He was awarded the doctorate from the University of North Carolina. He is a member of the American Accounting Association, the National Association of Accountants, and the Institute of Management Accountants. He also has a certificate in Management Accounting (CMA). Dr. Sanders is one of only 61 people who passed all five parts of the first CMA exam in 1972.
