McSheehy, Brammer seek SGA presidency

Brammer

Elections for the SGA's executive officials continue today. Polls will be open in the lobby of Long Student Center from 8 to 11 a.m., and in Harden Cafeteria from 11:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. and from 4:30 to 6 p.m.

Running for president are Mark Brammer and Diane McSheehy. Bob Moser is unopposed in the vice presidential race, as is John Smith in the election for treasurer.

Student senate elections will be held April 13 through April 15. The deadline for senate candidates' filing has been extended from last Friday to next Monday because there are not enough candidates to fill the senate.

Brammer, a senior from Wollwine, Va., majoring in science education, is a member of Pi Kappa Phi fraternity and serves as vice president of the Inter-fraternal Council. He is a past treasurer of the council. He has been active in numerous community activities on and off campus.

McSheehy, a junior English major from Plais-tow, N.H., is a member of Omicron Delta Kappa honor society who serves as attorney general of the Honor Court. She also is a resident advisor and has worked on Colonnades. She has served as chairperson of the Liberal Arts Forum and is listed in Who's Who Among College Students. She has been active in community services also.

Speaking to students in Mooney Theater Tuesday, both presidential candidates said that they wanted students to become more aware of the student government and the things it is involved in.

McSheehy said that if elected she would work for more relaxed visitation policies, a solution to Greek organizations' housing problems, a change in the campus party policy, more upper level courses and the parking problems on campus.

"I have read and researched the responsibilities of the SGA president, and, believe it or not, I still want the job," McSheehy said.

Brammer said that he knew "Elon is a 'suitcase college' on the weekend." He said he would work to get more activities on campus and to make the students aware of those activities.

"Student government should work for the students because the students pay for it," Brammer said.

Current SGA Vice President Rodney Beebe said he did not understand the reason why more students did not file for election or become involved in the SGA.

"Maybe they think we don't have any power," Beebe said, "or maybe they just don't care."

McSheehy

"I can't think of what causes people not to care. The SGA is supposed to be oriented to these people. If we were pushing an issue like visitation last year without student support, it would just right through the administration.

"The SGA could be so good," he said, "if the students could at least serve as guide for us, this office would work much better."

Elon students join State's victory bash

There was paint all over the place, people climbing lamp posts, and people waving banners and cheering from the roofs of cars. Fireworks could be seen over the buildings and a giant "1" was seen on a radio tower.

Sound like a scene from Franklin Street in Chapel Hill? Wrong. The scene was Hillsborough Street in Raleigh, home of the N.C. State Wolfpack — 1983 NCAA Champions.

The Wolfpack had just won the NCAA Title after a 4-52 victory over the heavily favored Houston Cougars.

Many Elon students left for Raleigh right after dinner. Many more waited until after the game was over. They piled people in cars and vans and after making a quick stop for beer at the local Winn Dixie, and convenience stores started on the hour-long trek to Raleigh. The party had just begun.

The Student Body, a Raleigh bar, was where many Elon students went to watch the game. However, it was so crowded that even with the big screen TV and another regular size TV many people didn't see half of what was going on. Even the people standing on tables and bar stools and sitting on the rafters could not see.

But it didn't really matter because they could always tell when the Wolfpack made a good shot. The screams and cheers of "Go to hell, Houston," and "Phi Slamma Who?" could be heard throughout the bar.

Behind the Breakfast Nook, a small restaurant on campus, cheers could be heard after every successful Wolfpack shot from every fraternity house on the street.

The Delta Upsilon of State had filled their frat house to the maximum. Many tried to get a head count to see if they had broken some sort of record, but it seemed impossible. "This is awesome" one frat member exclaimed over and over again as State grabbed a 10-point lead in the first half.

After the final shot of the game, and all of the hugs and kisses were given out, the crowd moved on to Hillsborough Street and towards the "Brickyard" where there was a huge bonfire.

Several people walked down the street carrying couches, chairs and other pieces of furniture. This furniture seemed to keep the fire burning along with banners, posters and signs saying "NCSU Wolfpack #1" and "Phi Packa Jamma" were to be seen all over the

"Brickyard."

The lines for the beverage stores were beginning to reach out the door and into the streets. Everybody seemed to be having a great time — except, of course, the security and police officers on duty. About midnight one police officer was heard remarking that he dreaded the rest of the night and the problems that security forces were going to have. Already beer bottles and other glass was broken all over the "Brickyard" and on Hillsborough Street, and the thousands of celebrating Wolfpack fans were beginning to get very rowdy.

For the many Elon students who took the road trip to Raleigh Monday night it was "awesome" and "unreal" and in more ways than one — a memorable one.

ALPHA CHI inductions were held last week. Alpha Chi is Elon's highest honor society and to be eligible for membership one must be a junior or senior in good standing and have made high academic achievements.
