PRINCELY DINING: Elon students rehearse for this weekend's Jacobean Dinner. A three course meal will be served and chamber music played for the weekend festivities.

Jacobean pageant brings music, dance, food, writings

During the summer of 1983, Dr. Cardon V. Burnham of the Elon College fine arts department did extensive research on the Jacobean period, the rule of King James I of Great Britain.

The result of Burnham's research will be a Jacobean dinner-pageant presented here on Friday, Saturday, Sunday, at 7 p.m. on second-floor McEwen Dining Hall.

Burnham collected more than 100 pieces of authentic music from the Jacobean era, and he also wrote several scores especially for the dinner theatre.

"The dinner that will be served at the pageant will be typical of the food served during the Jacobean reign," Burnham said. However, he added, due to time and the inability of people to eat as much as they did in the seventeenth century, the menu will be much less extensive than the 32 courses that might have been served back then.

After the meal, two authentic Jacobean dances will be performed. The Pavane and Galliard have been choreographed by Pat Gray, dance instructor at Elon, with assistance by an expert from UNC-Greensboro in Elizabethan/Jacobean Dance.

The costumes, which were designed and made by Evelyn Miller, chief designer of dance at the North Carolina School of the Arts, will fill the stage with color and authenticity.

Burnham said the dinner-theatre is light, funny, and entertaining, yet dramatic.
