Real Men & Real Women

A General Studies Symposium Elon College — September 14-18, 1986

Sponsored by the Chaplain's Office and the General Studies Program, this symposium will examine the unfinished political agenda of sexual equality in American culture together with the unfinished human agenda of achieving a just and humane view of ourselves as men and women.

What we once called the "women's liberation" movement has caused us to recognize that the set of roles and expectations for women cannot be changed without corresponding changes in how men view themselves. Indeed, the issue is "human liberation."

So, who are the real men and real women? This symposium will seek positive answers to some very tough issues:

- ✓ What is it to be a whole person whether male or female?
- ✓ How do we honor the masculine and feminine attributes which are present in each of us?
- ✓ Does American culture prohibit men as well as women from realizing their true natures?
- ✓ In relationships, how do we know when we are true to ourselves and not to stereotypes?
- ✓ How can we achieve both economic opportunity and sexual equity?
