Baxter residence houses freshmen

The research for alternative housing for the overflow of students this semester has led to a familiar campus landmark. The newly renovated Baxter House has become home for 16 freshmen girls.

In previous years the Best Western Motel in Burlington has been used to house male students who unfortunately did not receive a room on campus. According to Valerie Luko, assistant dean of student affairs, the admissions procedures were concluded earlier this year to avoid using the motel for housing purposes.

This lessened the problem but did not solve it completely. Renovations were needed all over campus and some temporary living arrangements were set up for students.

At least 20 rooms were added on the main campus by changing lounges into rooms in several of the dorms.

Assigning three to a room is not an uncommon situation. In both Smith and Carolina dorms, many rooms are being shared by three people. This situation should be resolved within the next few weeks as students are placed in vacant and converted rooms on campus.

The Baxter House is one of the last additions to the housing situation. The 16 freshmen women now living in the house, which is located across the street from Carolina Dorm, are enjoying their unique arrangement.

Winter in England: culture, travel for credit

arts/music, history, math/education and religion: Each student will be enrolled in one of these courses and if successfully completed, will earn three semester hours.

Dr. Robert Nowell, assistant professor of communications, will be joining the program for the first time this winter. Visits to various radio and television stations will emphasize the differences between England's media system and our own.

Dr. Kathy Lyday-Lee, assistant professor of English, is involved in the program again this year. She will focus her class on differences in American and British dialect.

Dr. Arlene Goter, assistant professor of music, and her students will concentrate on contemporary trends in British arts as well as other traditional cultural offerings.

Mrs. Lela Faye Rich, assistant professor of history, will explore the role of women in British society.

Joyce Speas, assistant professor of math, and her class plan to visit various banks and the London Stock Exchange. They will compare differences between American and British activity in these areas.

There will be a group of students exploring the contributions of the Church of England to English culture led by Dr. James Pace, associate professor of religion. Visits to several cathedrals will be included in his study.

Elon has been sponsoring Study Abroad for 19 years. Students pay $1,625 for this opportunity. This fee includes airfare, hotel accommodations and daily breakfast. The group will spend most of January in England.

Among the many other landmarks that students will visit are the Abbey Church, Stratford-on-Avon (the home of playwright William Shakespeare), Stonehenge, Canterbury and the Holy Trinity Church where Shakespeare is buried. Students will also have the opportunity to attend a concert by the London Philharmonic Orchestra, see a performance of The Nutcracker and a Shakespearean play. English Shakespearean play. English pubs, which Rich is quick to point out, are a "social, cultural gathering place to eat, but not a bar," will be visited.

This year, students will spend a weekend in Edinburgh, Scotland, which is known for its St. Giles Cathedral. The trip home will also be unique, because this winter students will return via Amsterdam and have two nights and three days in Holland.

An average of 80 students participate in the program each year. Students fly non-stop from New York to London. There they will stay at Westminster Hotel, which provides easy access to the "tube," London's subway.

The last week of the trip will be allocated for those students desiring to travel elsewhere in Europe.
