

Campus shop remodeled

by Niki Novak
Staff Writer

Elon College has made many changes over the summer, among the most noticeable is the expansion of the campus shop.

The campus shop has doubled the selling space, and created more room for the students to move around. According to Lisa Hall, manager of the campus shop, it is easier to find materials and the text books are also more visible.

The campus shop has also added a paper back book and magazine section for the students convenience.

The renovations in the campus shop took approximately 5 weeks to complete reconstruction and moving. The cost of the renovations were minimal, according to Lisa Hall, since there was not alot of reconstruction involved. Mr. Robert Poindexter, Vice President for administrative services, was unable to comment on the cost of this project.

According to Ms. Hall the feedback from the students has been nothing but positive. In the next 3 to 5 years Elon plans to build a more centrally located facility down campus to house the campus shop.

Yellowstone park

More than 50 fire engines are standing by to protect homes for people living in the town of Silver Gate, Montana, this week. Fires have spread all over this town and into sections of Yellowstone National Park.

The situation is growing increasingly more and more each day as winds are spreading fire ash across the town and creating smaller, individual fires.

The northeastern entrance of Yellowstone National Park is also in distress as the fire is slowly deteriorating the park's main entrance.

Nearly 500 fire fighters are at the scene working day and night to get these fires under control. The main plan to stop the fires is to a "backfire" to cut off the fire's main fuel source.

More recently his voice has been heard among the cries for peace, specifically nuclear freeze and disarmament.

Coffin founded a disarmament program at Riverside Church in New York shortly after becoming the senior minister there in 1977, a position of envy to most liberal clergymen.

Coffin has traveled worldwide since that time promoting international peace and human rights. He resigned in January 1988 to lead a flagging SANE/Freeze revitalization of the public image of the 200,000-member coalition of national peace groups.
