Swimming, dancing and running. These are just a few of the events that will take place next week during Greek Week.

What is Greek Week? "Greek Week is a time when all of the greek organizations get together to compete and have a good time," said Kent Strosnider, student organizer of Greek Week.

This yearly event will be held April 15 - 21. Many of its traditions will still be upheld, although some changes have been made.

More organizations have been asked to participate. Alpha Kappa Alpha and Delta Sigma Theta have joined together to participate in certain events. Omega Psi Phi, Kappa Alpha Psi and Alpha Phi Alpha have also joined together to compete against others.

"Since these sororities and fraternities aren't as large as others, they will be able to join together to compete," said Nancy Stockdell, student coordinator of Greek Week.

Another change that has taken place is eligibility. It used to be if you participated in an Elon sport, you would not be able to compete in that sport during Greek Week. Now everyone will be able to participate. "The committee decided to let everyone participate," Stockdale said. "It wasn't fair to not let someone participate just because they had a talent."

While most of the events are the same for fraternities and sororities, there are a few differences. "The sororities voted this year to do a lot of the same events as fraternities," Strosnider said. "The only events the girls aren't doing are the three jumping events and golf."

The official schedule of events for Greek Week will be out on Friday, April 12.
