

The Lovejoys

Still together

The Lovejoys appear at the Lighthouse

Have you heard the rumor that the Lovejoys have broken up? Band member Rich Green said that a Domino's Pizza deliveryman brought the rumor to his attention. "The Domino's Pizza delivery man came to my house and said that he heard that we had broken up. I laughed and denied the rumor."

The reason people might be saying this is that the band has been playing in various Greensboro night clubs instead of in Elon. The Elon-based band has been busy, opening for national acts such as Dillon Fence and Flat Duo Jets. They have also recorded another demo tape and have sent copies of their songs to radio stations at Duke University and Guilford College.

Another new development is that the band has recorded two new songs, entitled "Big Medium" and "Phenomena of the Mynde". These can be heard on WSOE. If you attended the Battle of the Bands last Saturday in Whitley Auditorium, the Lovejoys were there under an assumed name.

Band member Lee Wallace said, "We weren't there to compete, just to try out new material."

The Lovejoys are still composing most of their material, which consists of everything from pop to progressive. They are glad to be performing in Elon again. Their next performance will be September 25 at the Lighthouse. There is a $3.00 cover charge for the show.
